Four Taxless Cities.
Startling News, Indeed.
Borah Would Forgive.
An Imperial Experiment.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IN CHICAGO 100,000 pieces of real estate are ordered sold for taxes. In New York, the best known hotel, with no mortgage on it, pays about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year taxes, and costs its owner one hundred thousand more than it takes in.

Such taxpayers will read with interest that Beliot is the fourth city in Kansas to suspend all taxes because the city-owned, light and water departments make enough profit to pay the city's expenses.

Chanute, Colby and Augusta are the three other cities in Kansas tax free because citizens know enough to own their natural monopolies.

QUERY: WHAT will be done about power developed by the new St. Lawrence waterway?

In Canada, of course, it will be owned by the people, as Canada's share of Niagara's power is publicly owned. What about Uncle Sam's half of the two million horse power that the waterway will produce? Will it become the property of the people, taxed to build the six hundred million dollar waterway, or will it be distributed by "our best minds," among "the right kind of people?"

If you think the American people will be allowed to own that water power, you have forgotten Muscle Shoals, and you do not know much about United States methods, or about ONE thing that is the matter with this country.

HERE IS NEWS to startle a nation supposed to be governed by financial interests, and run for their benefit.

Because the Chicago Board of Trade would not allow the "farmers' co-operative" to utilize its facilities, the government bars all speculation on grain futures for sixty days. The Board of Trade will fight the order, and says operations for cash cannot be stopped in any case.

FARMERS COMPLAINED. The board members say the government order is dictated by the election. If the order is not rescinded, the theory that speculation in grain, as in stocks, is necessary to prosperity and easy marketing will be tested.

Northwestern farmers are harvesting their wheat two weeks sooner than usual. The Chicago board men predict that Winnipeg and Minneapolis will not be able to handle the business with Chicago's board shut down. The drastic order, said to have turned toward Roosevelt many board members that were shouting for Hoover, emphasizes the fact that our presidents have great power, if they choose to use it.

SENATOR BORAH thinks Europe's debts to us should be cancelled, not that he wants to do Europe any favor, but because cancellation would "aid the preservation of modern civilization." Perhaps you heard the Senator, on the radio.

Many Americans reject the idea that Europe's civilization, of which we had a sample in the big war, should be "preserved" in American money, and they cannot see why we should pay for a war that we SURELY did not start.

THE FACT that the Allies will steal from Germany, as part of their victory, certain billions that Germany has not got, seems a poor excuse for not paying a legitimate debt, already voluntarily cut in half.

However, it matters little what is suggested, since Europe appears to have reached a "gentlemen-welcher agreement," not to pay her debt to this country, anyhow.

AT OTTAWA, Britain and the dominions are working intelligently on the plan to buy from each other and boycott other countries, while continuing, of course, to sell goods to those other countries.

Canada proposes to Britain that she will buy from Lancashire mills, textile products that Canada now buys mainly in New England. Great Britain, in return, is to stop buying mutton, beef, hides, wheat, etc., from the Argentine, the U. S. A. and other sources, non-British. Canada demands, particularly, that Britain cease buying of Russia.

EVERYTHING AT Ottawa is done frankly, openly, strictly in accordance with the rights of the dominions and mother country. If the units of the British Empire can deal among themselves, free of tariff, as our 48 states deal among themselves, they should do it.

Other nations should, and probably will make plans to meet a widespread "closed market."

To say that one-quarter of the world's population is represented at Ottawa is almost true, but less important than it sounds.

The "one-quarter" includes three hundred millions in India, which, in the first place cannot buy half as much as the state of New York alone, and in the second place is engaged in a Gandhi effort to boycott British goods.

THE COUNTRY, doubtless, will arrange with other fragments of civilization, outside of "the Empire," to carry on trade

You might even hear from Washington that we are planning to forgive Russia for choosing her own kind of government, as we chose ours, some time back.

The question most important to the empire is this:

"Can Great Britain, not self-supporting, except by export trade, and not understanding economical mass

Routs Burglar

MRS. SIMON T. PATTERSON.

Pittsburgh society leader whose screams put to flight a prowler who had leveled a revolver at her in the bedroom of her fashionable Darlington road home. She explains: "You should hear my voice."

MILITIA SHOTS HIT YACHT, GIRL

WAUKEGAN, Ill., July 25.—(AP.)—Stray bullets from the Camp Logan rifle range raked a yacht one mile off the Lake Michigan shore yesterday, wounding a girl three times and imperiling 19 others in the party.

The craft, owned by Wellington Quirk, wealthy amateur aviator, of Evanston, was headed for Winthrop Harbor when Miss Rose Peterson, 23, of Evanston, screamed she had been shot in the leg. Other bullets struck the side of the yacht, which put into Waukegan. Miss Peterson was taken to a hospital, not seriously hurt.

The police said members of 132nd Illinois Infantry were on the range, north of Zion City, at the time of the shooting.

Man 'Drowns' Self In Vinegar Crock

MORRISTOWN, N. J., July 25.—(INS.)—Ill health was officially assigned today as the motive for the suicide of Benjamin Natkins, 58, former executive of a soft drink concern, who ended his life by immersing his head in a large crock containing vinegar.

His body was found by his wife in the cellar of his palatial home in Brookside, N. J.

White House Gets New Coat of Paint

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP.)—The White House will be whiter in a little while. Workmen today began painting that part of the executive mansion which looks out across broad lawns to the Washington monument.

Although parts of the mansion have been retouched during the past year it has not had a full coat of paint for two years.

Hoover Back at Desk After Rapidan Trip

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP.)—President Hoover returned to the White House this morning, going almost immediately to his desk, after a week-end of rest and relaxation at his Rapidan Mountain camp.

SEEKS THIEF SHE ROUTED BY SCREAM

Society Woman Scans Rogues' Gallery, but Finds No Clue

Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, leader in Pittsburgh society, today in Central Police Station futilely scanned the photographs of hundreds of criminals in search of a burglar she vowed she'd turn up—the intruder who invaded her fashionable Squirrel Hill home and fled only after the well-known sportswoman screamed loudly as he pointed a revolver at her.

Mrs. Patterson, whose courage in riding side-saddle and taking the hurdles at the Sewickley horse show amazes others in society, makes no bones about the fact that she screamed lustily when a burglar opened her bedroom door at 5 o'clock in the morning and pointed a potent pistol in her direction.

NOTHING ELSE TO DO

Mrs. Patterson asks:

"What else could I do? I couldn't reach for a revolver, or he would have shot."

Did Mrs. Patterson scream loud?

"You should hear my voice!"

The burglar paid impressive tribute to the society leader's vocal prowess by going away from the Patterson home in the manner of a commuter who is four minutes late for the 5:15.

Today Mrs. Patterson, busy answering questions about the burglary, found time to bundle herself into her things and hurry to Central Police Station. She says:

"I'm going to get that man."

SEEKS INTRUDER

Mrs. Patterson was anxious to look over the frank collection of criminals' photographs at the police station.

Golfer, tennis player and horsewoman, Mrs. Patterson seemed

Dies Kissing Blarney Stone

CORK, Irish Free State, July 25.—(AP.)—James Burke, of Charleville, insisted he could kiss the Blarney Stone without anyone holding his legs as he hung head downward over the parapet, as so many pilgrims have done.

He tried it, slipped, and fell 100 feet to his death at the foot of the ancient castle.

Kissing the stone, tradition says, gives the power of eloquent and persuasive speech.

10 Hurt, 1 Missing In Bus Garage Blast

ST. LOUIS, July 25.—(AP.)—Ten men were injured, three seriously, and one man was missing in an explosion today which wrecked the front end of the large service garage of Pickwick-Greyhound Lines, Inc., while about 25 mechanics and bus drivers were in the building.

Firemen expressed belief the explosion was caused by accidental ignition of a gasoline tank. Windows for a distance of seven blocks were broken. Damage was estimated at $50,000.

MRS. MIRIAM FERGUSON

TEXAS ANTI-DRY 3-1; 'MA' LEADS

DALLAS, Tex., July 25.—(INS.)—Texas is 3 to 1 in favor of resubmission of the prohibition question, returns from Saturday's primary disclosed today.

Tabulations of the vote in 235 of the state's 254 counties showed 218,963 for resubmission and 88,518 against. The question was left off the ballot in some counties, largely because of the expense.

Mrs. Miriam (Ma) Ferguson, a former governor and the wife of a former governor, piled up a lead of more than 73,000 votes over her nearest opponent, Gov. Ross Sterling, for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Mrs. Ferguson had 264,594 votes, Gov. Sterling 191,428, and Tom Hunter, an attorney and oil man, 139,944. It was evident that Mrs. Ferguson and Gov. Sterling will be in a run-off election next month.

Song, Lyric Writers Married Secretly

LOS ANGELES, July 25.—(Universal.)—After keeping their secret successfully for more than a month, it was learned Nacio Herb Brown, internationally famous song writer, and Miss Jeanne Borlini Lochart, lyric writer, were married in Virginia City, Nev., June 20.

The romance had its inception, friends say, when the two met at the home of Frances Marion, screen writer.

BULLETIN.

Maj. Jimmy Doolittle and Miss Anne Madison Washington landed at the new county airport at 2:40 o'clock this afternoon in their dawn-to-dusk flight covering the trails traveled by George Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP.)—Maj. James H. Doolittle and Miss Anne Madison Washington, on a dawn-to-dusk flight covering the trails traveled by George Washington, streaked away from Washington Hoover airport at 9:15 a. m. (eastern daylight time) today after a refueling stop in the national capital.

Three quarters of the journey was ahead of the pair, with the next stop scheduled for Pittsburgh at 3:30 p. m. daylight time. They started from Boston at 4:25 a. m. daylight time.

Miss Washington, great-great-great grand niece of the first President, had little to say in the half hour stay in Washington except "everything was just fine and we dropped every package of mail along the way right on the dot."

AIR NOVICE

This is Miss Washington's third airplane ride, the other two being in preparation for this trip.

The airplane, a low-wing yellow speedster, was loaded with 250 gallons of gasoline here before taking off, on a route including Mount Vernon, where Washington lived and is buried.

The other points on the itinerary where mail will be dropped are Fredericksburg, Va., Washington's birthplace; Williamsburg, Va.; Sunbury, N. C.; Winchester, Va.; Uniontown, and Pittsburgh, Pa.; Point Pleasant, W. Va.; Pomeroy, O.; Waterford, Pa.; Rome, Crown Point, Albany, and West Point, N. Y.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 25.—(AP.)—Capt. Wolfgang Von Gronau, making his third flight across the Atlantic by the Arctic route, took off at 11 a. m. (Pittsburgh time) today from Ivigtut, Greenland.

He reported by radio that he would head for Cartwright on the Labrador coast.

Kaiser's Grandsons Driving to Detroit

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP.)—The former Prince Frederick of Prussia, son of the former Crown Prince of Germany, arrived on the liner Bremen today and was met by his brother, Louis Ferdinand, who said he had driven from Detroit, where he works, 14 hours. The former princes left immediately by auto for Detroit.

Arkansas Guardsmen Rush to Mine Zone

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 25.—(AP.)—Sheriff Fred Russell, of Clarksville, telephoned Gov. Parnell today that he anticipated an outbreak between union and non-union coal miners and the Governor ordered a company of National Guardsmen there to prepare for eventualities.

PINCHOT SPURS INVESTIGATION OF AINEY

Alleged Investments Of P. S. C. Head May Be Probed

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, July 25.—Gov. Pinchot, according to reliable report about the Capitol, this afternoon will ask the Senate committee investigating charges that Chairman William D. B. Ainey, of the Public Service Commission, had received huge sums from the late Thomas E. Mitten, of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, to investigate Ainey's private financial affairs.

It is reported the Governor has been making inquiry through trusted agents of alleged stock transactions and investments either by Ainey or supposedly on his behalf, and will lay the results of this investigation before the Senators, the majority of whom, until this time, have felt there was no substance for the charges made against the commission chairman by A. A. Chapman, former secretary to Mitten.

The committee had indicated no intention voluntarily to examine Ainey's private affairs, and was apparently not concerned about Ainey's refusal, at a hearing before the Governor two weeks ago, to reveal the status of his real estate and stock holdings when he became a member of the commission 17 years ago, and through subsequent years.

No word has been received by Mr. Pinchot from Emerson Collins, another member of the Public Service Commission, whose resignation has been asked on the score of "inefficiency and neglect of duty" because of illness.

MORE CALLED IN COUNTY QUIZ

More subpenas were being served on county employes today in the grand jury's probe of county government. The grand jury convened this afternoon after a two-day recess over the week-end, and District Attorney Andrew T. Park was to spend the afternoon going over the testimony in the probe of Watson Bowser's airport hauling contract; misuse of county gasoline and wholesale purchases of tax receipts.

The latest witnesses called, it is understood, are employes of the county treasurer's and tax collector's offices. The grand jury will resume hearing testimony tomorrow morning, it was understood.

Hitler Aide Denies Kaiser Preditcion

BERLIN, July 25.—(INS.)—The chief of the Fascist party press bureau, Hans Hinkel, today issued formal denial of published reports that Prince August Wilhelm had predicted the restoration of his father, the former Kaiser, in a Fascist campaign speech last night. The statement said:

"Our comrade, Prince August, did not refer to the Kaiser's return. He strictly adhered to our program, which holds the question of republic or monarchy in Germany non-essential and recognizes but one leader—Adolf Hitler."

Sued for Rent

MARY MULHERN

Film actress and former wife of Jack Pickford, awaiting decision of a New York court on her motion to vacate a $2,150 judgment. She was sued for that amount on claims for rent on an apartment for a year. Miss Mulhern holds she signed no lease and then decided she wouldn't live in the apartment.

SLEEPING GIRL GAINS WEIGHT

CHICAGO, July 25.—(INS.)—Medical authorities were astonished today at the obvious gain in health made by Patricia Maguire, 27, during the six long months that she has been a victim of sleeping sickness.

Since last February, when she lapsed into a coma, Miss Maguire has gained 22 pounds, her hair has grown luxuriantly, and her complexion has taken on the glow of well-being.

Miss Maguire is fed liquid food through tubes. She is given orange juice, eggnogs, and a mixture of eggs and milk. For a brief period each day she is exposed to ultra-violet rays.

The girl has recognized no one at her bedside for the last 162 days, although she sometimes flickers her eyes and mutters a few unintelligible words.

CROWDS SEE CLASH NEAR TREASURY

Half a Dozen Melees Rage; Mansion Heavily Guarded

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP.)—Scuffling broke out and night sticks were swung at Fifteenth street and New York avenue today as police turned back the radical wing of the bonus marchers a block from the White House.

Two members of the radical "left wing" of the bonus army were arrested in the clash with police as they blocked all traffic in the immediate vicinity of the White House.

After the group, led by John Pace, of Detroit, had been denied permission to turn down Pennsylvania avenue in front of the Treasury, they crossed to the other side and attempted to continue the march toward the White House.

POLICE BLOCK MARCH

Burly policemen blocked the way and as they attempted to press on a brisk setto started.

As one officer was tripped and fell to the street, another policeman knocked to the ground the bearded bonus marcher who had attacked his comrade.

After the brief skirmish, participated in by about a score of marchers and half that number of police, the veterans proceeded eastward on New York avenue away from the White House. They said they were headed for their billets.

They marched off after policemen had asked Pace where he was going, and, pointing away from the White House, said:

"Well, walk in that direction."

Pace said:

"But we want to go to look at the White House."

CRIES OF DISGUST

The policeman took him by the arm and started him down New York avenue directly away from the executive mansion. Pace went with only a slight show of resistance and his followers, after a few yells of disgust, followed him. The principal shout was:

"Wall street government."

Several thousand spectators jammed the streets.

Both of the men taken into custody struggled fiercely with the police and one had his shirt ripped to pieces before he was tossed into a patrol wagon.

Other members of the veterans' group began to scatter as police

BLONDIE OF THE FOLLIES

A Heart-Gripping Story of a Glamorous Show Girl

By FRANCES MARION

CHAPTER I.

"Now listen, Lottie, you got no business picking up with strange men. How do you know what'll happen?"

Blondie McClune slammed the door of her locker to emphasize the plea to her friend, Lottie Callahan.

It was closing time at Lacy's Dry Goods store. Several hundred girls were banging locker doors, wriggling into jackets, jamming down hats, and daubing rouge and lipstick on drawn faces. These essentials quickly completed they made their way to the crowded exit.

Lottie ignored Blondie's question.

"They have a swell car," she bragged, straightening the seams in stockings that covered a pair of shapely legs. "It's one of those new low ones, covered cro cro-cro——, oh, you know, that shiny silver stuff like those new picture frames we just got in. Aw, come on, Blondie, they won't bite you. Gee, they're just going to take us home!"

"Yeh, we've heard that before," answered Blondie, pulling her little hat down over a mass of rebellious blonde curls. "Come on, let's get out of here. But I'm not going in any automobile!"

Blondie Disapproves of Lottie's Date

Lottie slammed her locker door, and the two girls hurried toward the exit. As they reached the door a voice called:

"Good night, Miss Blondie!"

"Good night, Pops! Don't sleep on that new shipment of ladies' nighties!"

The old night watchman grinned widely. Everybody liked this little blonde with the soft blue eyes that sparkled. When she smiled her sensitive mouth disclosed a row of shining teeth. Little freckles were splattered over her slightly upturned nose. Blondie was never too tired or troubled to toss a cheery greeting to Pops.

And Blondie was troubled tonight. Of all the dates Lottie made, she liked this one the least. As she reached the street with the milling crowd, she looked toward the curb past the group of waiting men expectantly watching the girls pouring out of Lacy's. She spotted the flashy roadster a short distance down the street and quickly sized up its two occupants. One had a loudly patterned suit, an even louder necktie, and wore a derby hat tilted over one eye. The other, in the driver's seat, chewed a thick cigar, its elaborate band still in place. His hand, on top of the wheel, displayed a large

BORAH DEBT CANCELLATION PLEA ASSAILED IN CAPITAL

SENATE, HOUSE CHIEFS SCORE PROPOSAL

Idahoan Speaking As Individual and Not For 'Administration'

By ROBERT BARRY
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Senator Borah's latest "trial balloon" on war debt cancellation has popped and fallen to earth, shot full of holes by a barrage of hostile opinion.

The Senator's proposal that the United States immediately lay a $11,000,000,000 bag of American gold on an international conference table as a bribe for undefined, ephemeral economic favors from Europe was dismissed promptly as just another one of those notions the Idohan has from time to time to provide a 24-hour sensation in Washington.

The capital simply declined to believe that anything like that is going to happen. Opinion was not moved by his threat of "appalling consequences" if his scheme were to be rejected or delayed.

ACTS AS INDIVIDUAL

Hoover spokesmen insisted Borah was not acting for the administration. State Department officials declared they knew of no departure from the policy outlined in May that the proposed League of Nations economic conference, in the autumn or early winter, could not deal with war debts, reparations or disarmament.

The Senator himself denied yesterday his radio speech of Saturday night was a "feeler" for the administration.

The poverty of results at the Geneva disarmament conference, and the established French thesis of having all the results agreed to in secret prior to any public conferences on any topic, were sufficient disillusionment for most Washington leaders. They want no further participation of Americans in such hippodroming.

ASKS GOOD FAITH

Senator Watson (Rep.), of Indiana, majority leader of the Senate said:

"Let Europe give us some evidence, even some slight intimation, of good faith before we talk of accepting promises from them. I am absolutely unqualifiedly opposed to participation by the United States in any conference which has for its purpose the discussion of debts which individual nations owe to the American people."

Representative Rainey (Dem.), of Illinois, majority leader of the House, could find nothing in the Borah proposal with which he could agree. Rainey said:

"Senator Borah's speech contemplates cancellation of debts owing to us. That is out of the question.

"The debts which the Lausanne conference reduced were political debts. Our debts are different."

Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, chairman of the Finance Committee, which passes on all debt questions, said:

"There is no reason why the debts should be reduced or canceled. Senator Borah may know something I don't know—some reason for cancellation. I don't know of any reason for it. I haven't changed my mind a particle."

U. S. Employes Get Saturday Furloughs

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(INS.)—Under the provisions of the so-called Economy Act, all officers and employes of the Labor Department will be furloughed on Saturday of each week for 48 weeks, beginning July 30, Secretary Doak announced today.

He said this method of carrying into effect the provisions of the act will be applied to the field service so far as practicable, but will not apply to officers or employes while under travel status.

Three Die in Auto's Plunge Down Bank

FAIRMONT, W. Va., July 25.—(AP.)—An automobile crashed into the approach wall of the Geising Bridge and fell down a 40-foot embankment today, killing three persons. The dead are C. P. Getrel, Pensboro; James Lambert, Pensboro, and Pearl Cain, Meadowbrook.

An unidentified woman, said to have been driving the machine, was sought for questioning.

STATE RELIEF COMPROMISE REMOTE

Pinchot Stands Firm Against Aid Fund Abatements

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, July 25.—If the Legislature passes an economy bill for $18,000,000 savings in government expenditures, together with a $24,000,000 relief bill, then abruptly adjourns, there will be no relief accomplishment from the special session.

Gov. Pinchot has let it be known that he will veto expenses slashes which he believes unwarranted and will sign no relief bill which does not have behind it revenue necessary to meet its requirements without new abatements to hospitals, mothers' assistance and other state-aided institutions.

This attitude of the Governor is well known. There is, to date, no evidence of compromise between his views and those of legislative leaders who started with a projected shaving of $27,000,000, reduced it to $18,000,000, but remained far from the figure the Governor said could be saved, $5,000,000.

Partisan leaders today are advocating adjournment with the bills on the Governor's desk, attempting to put on him the burden of criticism if nothing is accomplished. Their attitude is in direct variance with that of the Federal Congress, which gave President Hoover the chance to veto the Garner-Wagner relief bill, then remained in session to pass a measure which was acceptable.

Future strategy, including the date of adjournment of the Legislature, will be decided tonight after the Senate votes on the economy bills.

CHICAGO BOARD TO TEST GRAIN FUTURES ACT

Appeal From Federal Closing Order to Be Taken

CHICAGO, July 25.—(AP.)—The Board of Trade's appeal from the federal closing order will be built around a test of the constitutionality of the grain futures act.

This appeal, in preparation today by Peter Carey, president, and other officials of the board, will be presented "some time within the next few days" before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Today's was the first trading session since the commission of three 'cabinet memberes ordered the Board of Trade closed for 60 days for violating the grain futures act.

WHEAT SLUMPS

Wheat opened higher today, but later slumped down below last week's close. This was attributed to selling pressure and some traders hastened to lay the slump at the door of the closing order. Aside from this, there was no noticeable reaction to the federal ruling.

Carey, in a message to the membership, asked traders "to advise their customers that there is no occasion for alarm over existing contracts or new contracts that may be entered into.

The Board of Trade officials have announced their intention to carry the appeal, if necessary, to the Supreme Court. If this results, a decision is not expected until after the movement of this year's crop, at the earliest.

TEST EXPECTED

Discussing the closing on the trading floor today, Carey said:

"We expect, when we go into court, to test the constitutionality of the grain futures act. And we are going to determine whether or not the Farmers National Grain Corporation can qualify as a co-operative."

It was the conflict between the Farmers National and the Board of Trade that resulted in the government-sponsored co-operative's charge that the board had violated the grain futures act in denying it a membership in the board's clearing house association.

Through the Updike Grain Company, a subsidiary, the Farmers National had clearing house facilities.

But the board charged the officers of the Updike company had avowed ownership of stock, whereas "in reality the company was owned by the Farmers National Grain Corporation." After a hearing, the Updike company was suspended May 25.

DENY MELLON PLANS TO QUIT

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(INS.)—The State Department said today it had "no indication or intimation" that Andrew Mellon, ambassador to the court of St. James, planned to resign.

It said the only information here is that Mellon had applied for and was granted leave of absence to attend to personal matters. A London paper published the report he is thinking about retiring.

The department also denied reports Mellon is returning here with new plans concerning this country's policy on Europe's war debts. Officials admitted, however, that the ambassador will thoroughly discuss the European situation with President Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson during his stay here.

COURT UPHOLDS DICTATORSHIP

BERLIN, July 25.—(INS.)—Government by dictatorship in the state of Prussia was upheld by the Federal Supreme Court in a decision handed down at Leipzig today.

An injunction sought by the Socialist ministry of the state ousted by Chancellor von Papen last week was denied. Von Papen will continue to rule Prussia like a king of old, at least until after the parliamentary elections next Sunday, and, if the polling results in another stalemate, perhaps indefinitely.

In rejecting Prussia's petition today, the court made it plain it was not finally deciding whether the Von Papen dictatorship is constitutional or not.

An injunction at this time, however, would be inappropriate, the judges decided, because it would impair the authoritiy of the state itself and increase the difficulties and friction existing between the Socialist government and the Reich itself whilie the issues were being finally weighed.

Germany to Back Anglo-French Pact

BERLIN, July 25.—(INS.)—The German Foreign Office announced today that after assuring itself that the recently announced Anglo-French entente was not directed against America, the government had decided to adhere to it.

MAN, 2 SONS DIE IN MINE SLIDE

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 25.—(AP.)—In the flickering light of pit lamps, stumbling rescuers yesterday recovered the bodies of a man and two small boys, buried in a fall of tons of slate in Nellie mine.

Albert Shearer, 35, of Vanderbilt, went into the abandoned working with his sons, James, 8, and Charles, 10, to dig coal.

Shearer was out of a job.

When they failed to return in the evening, Mrs. Shearer notified a relative. The alarm spread throughout the mining colony at dark and rescuers carried pit lamps into the mine.

Three hundred feet from the opening, they came upon tons of slate and rock and saw the bodies buried beneath the fall.

Physicians said Shearer and James probably had died within a short time after the cave-in; Charles had been dead but a few minutes.

DOUMER SLAYER ASKS DEATH

PARIS, July 25.—(INS.)—While Paul Gorguloff, assassin of President Paul Doumer, pleaded loudly that he be sentenced to die, the court of appeals today attempted to decide whether he was the paid agent of certain secret organizations, as charged by the prosecution, or whether he simply is a madman, unresponsible for his acts, as defense attorney contended.

While Gorguloff screamed for death in a rambling political harangue, which the court was unable to stop, his wife, about to bear him a child, sat in the courtroom sobbing convulsively and begging that her husband be allowed to live to see his child.

The defendant was brought in by four guards. Pale and much thinner than when he was sent to prison, Gorguloff bowed low before the jury. He answered the judge's formal questions in tones hardly audible. He looked sadly at his wife and smiled. She smiled back.

Stung by Bee, Sues Amusement Co.

CINCINNATI, O., July 25.—(AP.)—An amusement company's confections are too attractive for bees, Catherine Choka, 17, asserted in a suit. One bee, attracted by the sweets, found a temporary haven on her face while she was riding a roller-coaster, she charged. When she released her hand to brush the bee away, she was jolted from the car and injured $1,000 worth.

Most Commercial Air Fields in Penna.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP.)—Pennsylvania had more commercial flying fields July 1 than any other state. The Keystone state, with 64, led New York by six.

Pennsylvania was third, with 104, in total number of flying fields. California had 176, and Texas 142.

DINNER POISONS 32 GUARDSMEN

MT. GRETNA, Pa., July 25.—(AP.)—Thirty-two officers and men of the First City Troop of Philadelphia, recovering from an attack of ptomaine poisoning, must remain in the hospital for three or four days, National Guard medical officers decided today.

The men were taken ill after a dinner given them yesterday by Dawson Coleman, Lebanon banker.

All but three of the men are in the camp hospital here and are being attended by nurses brought from the State Hospital for Crippled Children at Elizabethtown. Three men, Samuel Gibbon, Robert Stout, and George Pepper, are in a Lebanon hospital.

Dr. Dewitt Kerr, of Lebanon, revealed today that Coleman and three servants also were victims but that all of them were recovering.

Brig. Gen. Edward C. Shannon, commanding the 52nd Cavelry Brigade, said the men became ill after eating chicken salad.

Court Term Dropped As Economy Move

BELLEFONTE, Pa., July 25.—(AP.)—To save Centre County money, Judge M. Ward Fleming has canceled September's term of Common Pleas Court and weekly special sessions. Special session terms will be held only once a month and then only if the District Attorney has pleas to present.

The saving will run between $1,500 and $2,000 a year, court attaches say.

BATTLE MARKS BONUS MARCH

rushed reinforcements and officers went through the throng ready for any eventualities.

Meantime, the area about the White House was quiet, with spectators cleared from the avenue and Lafayette Park, where members of the veteran's group ha congregated later.

TAKE POLICEMAN'S GUN

At Thirteenth and F streets, in the heart of the business district, as the main wing continued to their billets, one of the marchers snatched a policeman's pistol from its holster during a scuffle and ran rapidly down the street.

No shots were immediately fired as police took up the chase.

The trouble at this intersection developed when an obdurate veteran refused to leave the sidewalk as ordered by a policeman.

He swung at the officer. Although most of his companions had followed police orders, some returned to join in the affray.

Soon there were half a dozen separate melees going full tilt, short-lived but active.

One of the marchers arrested was Pace, leader of the radical wing. Two of his followers were seized and placed in taxicabs as the marchers came through Washington's most fashionable shopping and theater district during the crowded lunch hour.

Others arrested gave the names of Sylvester McKinney, of Oakland, Cal., and David Budd, of Washington.

Budd struck a photographer and was seized by the police and literally thrown into a taxicab.

When reports were first received of the march on the White House, police placed the executive mansion in the center of a hollow square, cutting off all automobile and pedestrian traffic.

Despite the rush hour at noon, Pennsylvania avenue and the narrow streets on each side of the White House were closed to traffic.

Police cleared Lafayette Park, the broad square across Pennsylvania avenue from the White House, and routed hundreds of pedestrians and spectators away from the executive mansion.

Meanwhile, Walter W. Waters, commander-in-chief of the Bonus Expeditionary Force, said his men would employ "passive resistance" if an effort is made to evict them from government property at midnight tonight. An order already has been issued giving them until this time to evacuate.

Highway Trucks Wait In Vain for Vets

HARRISBURG, July 25.—(INS.)—Chances of bonus marchers' obtaining the use of Pennsylvania Department of Highway trucks for free transpartation in the future appeared rather slim today after Saturday's disappointment.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot granted the use of the trucks to convoy the men across Pennsylvania upon the plea of Pelham D. Glassford chief of Washington police. The trucks were stationed at the Pennsylvania-Maryland line near Emmitsburg to receive the veterans en route from Washington. The vehicles were kept there until 8:30 Saturday night, but the bonus seekers never appeared.

Attaches of the State Highway Department said that no cancellation instructions were received from Washington, but that news filtered in over the week-end that the planned motor exodus of the veterans never materialized.

Neither the Governor's office nor the Highway Department was informed that the men were not coming, it was said here.

News dispatches Saturday night told how Washington police had supplied 40 trucks to move the California bonus delegation. Only their leader left—by private auto. The trucks were not needed.

SOCIETY WOMAN ROUTS THIEF

marked as just another burglary victim when the intruder leveled his revolver at her in her home at 5365 Darlington road. She had retired for the night, but hearing a squeaking noise arose to close the door of her daughter, Isabelle's, bedroom.

That's when the burglar came in. Mrs. Patterson said he had already visited the bedroom of her husband, Attorney Patterson, who happened to be out of the city, and taken nothing.

DEFENDS DOGS

Mrs. Patterson resents the report that her five dogs in the rear of the fashionable house failed to bark.

True enough, they did fail to bark but that's because the burglar didn't enter the house by a rear door or window, Mrs. Patterson explains.

There wasn't a pistol in the Patterson home when the burglar entered, but Mrs. Patterson adds:

"I've got one now . . . And don't make a sob story of this."

Gasoline Scarcity Cripples Jugoslavia

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, July 25.—(AP.)—Highway automobile traffic was seriously crippled throughout Jugoslavia today by a motor fuel famine.

The scarcity was ascribed chiefly to foreign exchange restrictions which make it difficult to import or pay for Rumanian or other foreign oil products.

Still Loves Chevalier, Actress-Wife Says

CANNES, France, July 25.—(INS.)—Yvonne Vallee, pretty French actress, still loves her smiling and singing husband, Maurice Chevalier, who has filed suit against her for divorce.

She will not fight the suit, and she will be legally parted from the now world-renowned movie star. But she has lost none of her love for the man she married as an only fair-salaried favorite of the French music halls. Miss Vallee told International News Service:

"It's not a question of getting a divorce. It's simply a question of our divorcing."

Then she added cryptically:

"Our love will be more lasting without matrimonial falsehoods. I know it sounds paradoxical, but it's the truth and that's all I'm saying now."

Mme. Chevalier has lost none of the wife's instinctive desire to take care of the man she married. She arrived here from Paris yesterday and went immediately to La Bocca, where the couple have a beautiful and costly villa, and began to prepare it for Maurice's summer vacation.

Phantom Sniper Bullet Pierces Preacher's Hat

HORNELL, N. Y., July 25.—(AP.)—A bullet hole through a clergyman's hat today added another chapter to the story of an old and isolated hilltop house near here. Several other tenants have fled from the dwelling in terror of what state troopers call a "phantom rifleman."

Lieut. Gerald Vaine, of the state police, said the rifleman, who has never been seen, apparently wanted to keep the house unoccupied, for some unknown reason.

The Rev. Herman Lee Henderson took it a short time ago as a summer home. In a note he found upon the well outside the house, weighted down by a rifle bullet of large caliber, the clergyman was warned to keep away from "the well." As he read the message, which carried a threat of death, a bullet sang through the air and lifted his hat from his head. The rifle report was faint, he said, and Lieut. Vaine suggested the weapon had been fired from a considerable distance by an expert marksman.

Later Henderson learned that at least five other tenants had been frightened from the premises by the "phantom." Lieut. Vaine said he would stay on the case until the "mystery" surrounding the house was cleared up.

ZIEGFELD'S WIDOW UPHOLDS TRADITION, 'SHOW GOES ON'

BILLIE BURKE'S FILM ROLE NOT INTERRUPTED

Stage Notables Attend Rites for Master Showman

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 25.—(AP.)—Following the old tradition of the theatrical world that "the show must go on," Billie Burke, widow of Florenz Ziegfeld, whose private funeral was held here yesterday, announced today she would return to the studios Wednesday to resume work on a film.

Through Will Rogers, an intimate friend of Ziegfeld, Miss Burke announced there will be no public funeral in New York City for her husband. Mayor James J. Walker, in a telephone message, had asked that the body be sent at once to New York.

The body of the musical comedy producer, known internationally as the glorifier of the American girl, lay in a vault in Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Glendale. It will be sent to New York for interment within a month.

'PROSECUTION,' SAYS LIBBY'S FATHER

'Torch Singer's' Ordeal At Reynold's Probe Denounced

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 25.—As a new grand jury expected to probe into the mysterious death of Zachary Smith Reynolds, 20-year-old heir to tobacco millions, convened today, a bitter controversy developed over the investigation into the tragedy between the father of Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds, widow of the dead boy, and officials of Forsyth County here.

Alfred Holman, father of the well-known Broadway singer, charged "persecution" and "self-seeking motives" by "zealous functionaries" in a telegram sent from his home in Cincinnati addressed to Sheriff Transou Scott, in charge of the investigation, to Solicitor Carlisle Higgins, who will handle the evidence gathered if the case is presented to the grand jury, and to J. Erle McMichaels, assistant solicitor. Holman asserted that there was obvious proof of self-destruction in connection with the death.

LIBBY IN SECLUSION

Holman, who is a lawyer, declared that his daughter was in seclusion recovering her health and was available at any time.

He termed the inquest conducted by Coroner W. N. Walton, into the Reynolds death was marked by "garbled human testimony" which was dictated by state counsel "with no right accorded to counsel for the involved parties to cross-examine." Mrs. Reynolds was held in custody as a material witness, with Ab Walker, friend of young Reynolds, during the inquest.

The Sheriff and Coroner were quick to answer the statement of Holman, the solicitor was out of town. Sheriff Scott said:

"The Coroner's jury failed to find that Smith Reynolds killed himself, but did say in their verdict that he met death at the hands of a party or parties unknown to them.

"It therefore becomes my duty to ascertain if possible, the party or parties who caused his death."

CORONER REPLIES

Coroner Dalton said:

"Dr. W. M. Johnson, who attended Mrs. Smith Reynolds after the death of her husband, gave his permission for the Coroner to question her at any time before the funeral was held.

"I showed Mrs. Reynolds the courtesy of postponing the actual questioning until after the funeral was held.

"In addition, during the questioning of Mrs. Reynolds and when she testified at the inquest, either her father, mother or sister, Mrs. Myron Kahn, were present with her."

PRINCESS IRENE PERILED WHEN CAR UPSETS

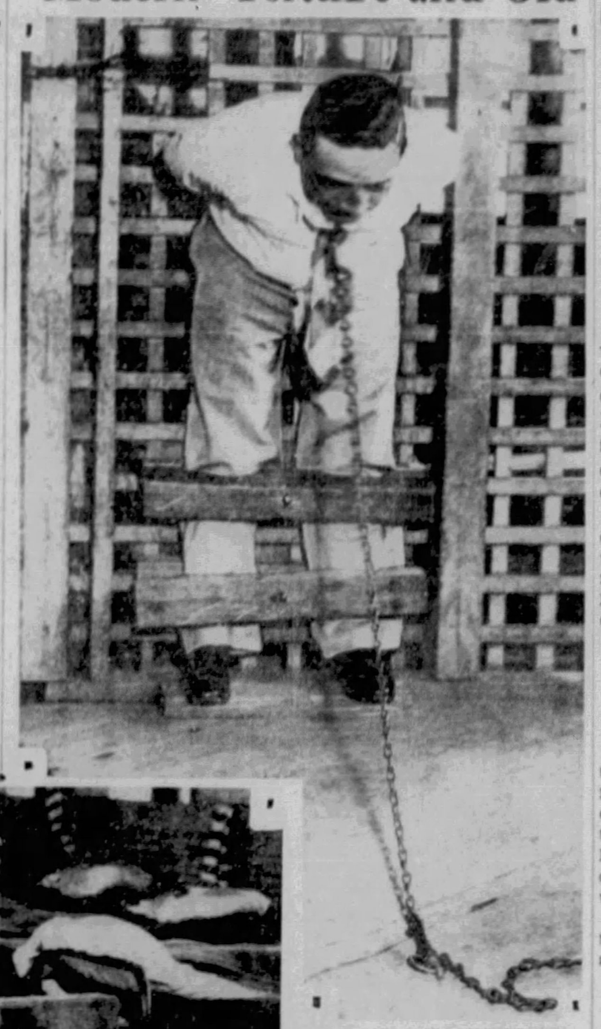
Escapes Serious Hurts On Return from Visit to Doorn

QUICKBORN, Holstein, Germany, July 25.—(AP.)—Princess Irene, widow of Prince Henry, only brother of former Kaiser Wilhelm II, narrowly escaped serious injury today when the automobile in which she was returning from Doorn to Kiel overturned.

First reports received here said the princess and a lady companion were seriously hurt, but later it was found out they were unharmed.

The chauffeur applied the brakes quickly to avoid a collision with another car coming in the opposite direction and the car in which the princess was riding overturned.

'Modern' Torture and Old



OLD-TIME STOCKS...MORE MERCIFUL THAN THE 'MODERN'

This is the method of confining prisoners in use today in Spalding County (Ga.) chain gang prison camp, revealed when the mother of W. O. The man shown above in these "modern" stocks was barely able to stand after five minutes. These are International News Photograph Service pictures.

JUDGE FAVORING BIRTH CONTROL STIRS FEUD

Chicago Jurist Scored For Laying Marital Strife to Children

CHICAGO, July 25.—(AP.)—A storm of contradictory comment has followed a decision by Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude in which he gave the first judicial approval of birth control ever expressed in Chicago.

The decision was given in the case of Mrs. Gertrude Bemis, who was granted separate maintenance from her husband, Walter J. Bemis, a consulting engineer. The court said:

"It is evident to me that too many children have been born to this couple. The mother rebelled at motherhood. The job was too much for her."

In granting the separate maintenance Judge Trude specifically cited the couple's five children as the reason for their marital discord, and ignored Mrs. Bemis' charge that her husband centered his attention on another woman.

Commenting on the court's action, Dr. Rachelle Yarros, a woman medical specialist, said:

"A woman ought to have the right to decide how many children she can care for without injury to her health."

Judge Joseph A. Graber, of the Court of Domestic Relations, on the other hand, took an opposing view. He said:

"I have found that children do more to patch up broken homes than any other single factor."

Judge Trude told Mrs. Bemis to go to California on a vacation, away from her five children.

FLO OWN RIVAL, SAYS ROGERS

LOS ANGELES, July 25.—(INS.)—Will Rogers, noted humorist, today paid deep tribute to the memory of a friend, Florenz Ziegfeld. He said:

"There's not much to be added to all the beautiful things that have been said about Mr. Ziegfeld. Everybody has been lovely to his memory and all of us who worked for him felt his loss deeply.

"I expect I worked for him longer than anyone else—and 10 years is a long time. But I never signed a contract, nor was there ever the mark of a pen in our business dealings.

"Mr. Ziegfeld was his own opposition. It never was a case of whether his show was better than anybody else's, but whether his newest show was better than his last one.

ROOSEVELT WET MOVE DENIED

NEW YORK, July 25.—(INS.)—Through the Roosevelt Democratic campaign headquarters here today, James Roosevelt, son of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, issued a complete denial of a report that he told Massachusetts Democrats yesterday that his father planned to call an immediate special session of Congress to consider repeal of the Volstead act if elected president. His statement said:

"I made no reference yesterday at the Wooster (Mass.) Democratic Club clambake to the calling of a special session of Congress by my father in the event of his election, nor did I in any way quote him concerning this or any other matter.

"I do not presume to speak for him in any way, unless I specifically so state by direct authority."

LONDON, July 25.—(AP.)—A plan for nationalizing the banks of England, long advocated by many British labor leaders, is included in the Labor party report on currency, bank and finance issued here today. It will be presented to the party conference in October.

Under the plan the governor of the bank would be appointed by the government and be subject to the direction of the cabinet. The report also recommends permanent abandonment of the gold standard.

Florida Prison Probe Hits Camp Inspectors

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., July 25.—(INS.)—A sweeping reorganization of the Florida state prison inspection service loomed today as a result of the series of road camp charges, involving mistreatment of prisoners.

The Arthur Maillefert case, in which the young New Jersey convict died of strangulation while being tortured in a medieval sweatbox, made state officials realize something was wrong with their prison inspection system. When other convicts charged camp captains and guards with cruelty, officials became convinced they would have to initiate a new system.

The crowning blow to the present system came when young Jimmy Dennison, of Philadelphia, lay for six months in the prison hospital at Raiford, Fla., helpless in a plaster cast and then charged a guard deliberately tried to murder him when he made a futile break for liberty last January. Dennison's story was brought to the attention of Gov. Doyle E. Carlton by International News Service and the prison inspection servicie was forced to admit it knew nothing about the case.

Agriculture Commissioner Nathan Mayo, at the direction of Gov. Carlton, took personal supervision of an investigation into the shooting of Dennison. Mayo announced he would go to Kenansville to interview every prisoner and guard in that camp.

Mayo declared he would ask for criminal indictments against all guards connected with the case if Dennison's charges are substantiated.

Gov. Carlton indicated he would reorganize the inspection service so that every prisoner would meet an inspector privately once a month at least.

TEN AT PICNIC PARTY DROWN

EUREKA, Cal., July 25.—(AP.)—Ten persons were believed drowned when ocean breakers overturned a 26-foot speed craft carrying a picnic party as the motor died at the mouth of the Eel River near here late yesterday.

Five bodies have been recovered. The Coroner reported one other was known to have drowned, and four persons were missing. Seven were reported rescued.

The disaster brought tragedy to the annual Humboldt County American Legion picnic, whose merrymakers witnessed the accident. Those in the boat were members of the picnic party.

BACARDI, RUM MAKER, DIES

SANTIAGO, Cuba, July 25.—(AP.)—Facundo Bacardi, vice president of the Bacardi Company, rum distillers, died early yesterday as the result of a pistol wound which he suffered a week ago from the accidental discharge of a policeman's gun.

Bacardi, who was 38, was wounded when he took a policeman's pistol from its holster in the Rialto Cafe to examine it. In replacing the weapon it was discharged, the bullet entering Bacardi's abdomen and lodging in the spine.

He was one of four brothers who operated the rum distilleries established by their grandfather in 1862. The small establishment set up by the grandfather has grown in three generations to a plant which produces 25,000 gallons of rum daily and has earned for the family a fortune of $50,000,000.

production in machinery or steel, find in her dominions enough unselfishness to make the 'Buy British' campaign a success?"

THE MIGHTY empire is making a gigantic experiment. Success would perpetuate and increase its power. Failure might reduce the British islands to a sort of "European home office" for the growing dominions, or even mean an end of the empire.

With their present limited strength in money and white population, it would seem that the dominions would be foolish to drop Mother Britannia's skirts for the present.

EIGHTEEN-YEAR-OLD "Curley" Harper stole cookies from a bakery and was locked up. With consent of the police, his mother entered his cell, took his leather belt and beat him with it, "at least fifty times," so says the Associated Press.

Curley, submitting to her beating, said he had run away from home because of previous beatings, and was hungry when he stole the cookies.

IF A DOG were thus treated, the "Cruelty Society" would interfere. If a well-bred puppy or horse were beaten in that way the owner would complain, knowing that his animal would be made worthless, its spirit broken.

Human beings are not exactly animals, of course, but the police, congratulating that mother on her firmness, might better have said to her:

"Whatever that boy is, thief or good-for-nothing, you and his father made him. You cannot change by mere brutality a creature for whom you are responsible."

MR. FARLEY, manager of the Roosevelt campaign, says he is sure of "every state except five." It is dangerous to be sure, so far in advance, and Mr. Farley knows that. His prediction is based on the wise maxim:

"To convince others, be yourself convinced."

The administration, with all its patronage and employes, backed by the Treasury's billions that can be placed here or there, has great power. Also organized capital has decided that it does not want Gov. Roosevelt, and there is one other complication, not publicly discussed, that will exercise influence in certain important states.

MORRIS WINS PLANE TESTS

MEADVILLE, Pa., July 25.—(AP.)—Jack Morris, Pittsburgh pilot, took most of the honors in a two-day show here following a Pittsburgh-Meadville handicap race.

Besides winning the race to Meadville in 53 minutes, Morris won the dead stick landing contest and as anchor man in a three-place relay race, overcame his opponent's lead to take the event. In this feature event he was teamed with N. W. Gibson, of Erie, and Buril Ruetenik, of Meadville.

Ruetenik took first honors in the balloon strafing contest, while Mr. and Mrs. Morris entertained Sunday's crowd with flying demonstrations.

In the race from Pittsburgh to Meadville, with six pilots entered, Morris was followed closely by Helen MacCloskey, also of Pittsburgh. The race and the air show were staged by the Pittsburgh Aviation Country Club and officials of Port Meadville.

LATROBE, Pa., July 25.—(AP.)—Fire of unknown origin destroyed a two-story building housing a general store near the Dorothy coal mine works yesterday. Firemen estimated the losses at $10,000.

4 BANDITS SLAIN BY POSSES

BOZEMAN, Mont., July 25.—(AP.)—Two asserted bank robbers who disrupted a card game at the cabin of Bud Henke in Gallatin Canyon Saturday with a demand for food were shot to death by possemen yesterday.

Authorities tentatively identified the robbers as Charles Larrison and Curtis Bardwell, wanted for the robbery of the Security National Bank and Trust Company here of $4,100 Friday.

The pair at guns' points broke up the card game of Mr. and Mrs. Henke and two other couples at the isolated cabin, and sent Henke to buy food. Instead, he called a posse, members of which killed the two men when they resisted. They came upon the gunmen in timber near the cabin. The men were slain in resisting arrest.

BROKEN BOW, Okla., July 25.—(AP.)—Two men suspected of participating in the $12,000 robbery of the First National Bank of Idabel, Okla., last Monday were shot to death in a pistol fight with officers.

TRAFFIC 'TAG' BARES TRAGEDY

CLEVELAND, O., July 25.—(AP.)—Failure to obey a traffic summons led investigating officers to discovery of a 42-hour old murder and suicide here.

The body of Mrs. Golden Beck, 36, clad in pajamas, with two bullet wounds, was found on a bed in her apartment and that of her husband, Charles, 48, commercial agent for the Erie Railroad, was found in the bathroom.

A patrolman had ticketed the Beck automobile Friday for violation of a parking law. Investigation of failure to obey the summons led to discovery of the double tragedy.

Police said they found three notes written by Beck evidently in suicidal mood.

HOOVER LOSES MILLIONS

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Herbert Hoover no longer is a millionaire president.

An article in the magazine Fortune declared today Mr. Hoover's personal fortune has shrunk from $4,000,000 at the time of his retirement from active business in 1914 to approximately $700,000 at present. The article said:

"Unfortunate investments, plus generous contributions to relief work, caused the shrinkage."

What is left of the President's once large fortune, it was added, is invested in bonds.

Aside from his $60,000 annual salary, the President's income is about $35,000 yearly, the article asserted. The President's $15,000 voluntary salary cut represented, therefore, a 13 per cent reduction.

The article went to great pains to deny that Mr. Hoover's fortune came from alleged improper promotion ventures in London or the Orient. Three-fourths of his wealth was acquired from the Burma mines, among the richest in the world in lead, silver, zinc and copper, it was stated.

CUT, MAN ROUTS TWO ROBBERS

As Edward Sprouse, 50, owner of the Parmelee Motor Fuel Company entered his office at 5820 Ellsworth avenue, early today, he was followed by two men.

In the office, one of the men slashed Sprouse on the face with a razor while the other looted the cash register of $75.

Both men fled as Sprouse opened fire on them. He fired three shots, but failed to hit either man.

Sprouse's wounds were slight.

Rescues Girl, But Sees Her Own Son Drown

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., July 25.—(AP.)—Unable to swim, Mrs. Ray Bunge of Catawissa waded into the Catawissa creek yesterday and rescued Ruth Heimbach, a neighbor's daughter, but saw her own 8-year-old son, Merlin, drown as he was swept into deeper water.

Miss Heimbach was trying to teach the boy to swim when she waded beyond her depth. She was caught in an undertow and lost her grip on the child. Mrs. Bunge fully clothed, jumped into the water after them but could save only Miss Heimbach.

Three other policemen were wounded one fatally.

Capt. Sierra met his death from a bomb explosion as he and a squad of raiding policemen smashed into a house where anti-government plotters were reported meeting.

The glamorous one after boarding a taxicab was swallowed up in the early morning traffic. Somewhere she and Mrs. Poole are laughing at having fooled the crowd, the camera and the reporters.

Greta is due to sail for Sweden on July 30 and there are rumors that she intends giving up her picture career to stay in her native land.

PARIS SAYS THE DECORATION MAKES OR SPOILS THE DRESS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, July 25.—It is less difficult, say the French, to know how to make a smart dress than it is to know what to leave off the dress once it is finished. Many an amateur designer, capable of cutting and putting together a thoroughly fashionable costume, has spoiled the result by adding one too many bows, or too many spots of color.

FRENCH designers study carefully this subject of decoration. They try each frock with several different color accents, with various hats and with gloves of different types. So often have they seen their own smartly cut clothes ruined in the wearing by some woman who did not know what to do about accessories that most of the important houses model their clothes with correct hat, gloves, jewels and even flowers.

THE SAME dress, trimmed with white, allows for more elaborate accessories—such as the shoes, hat and flowers sketched separately. The hat, from Mainbocher, is of silk surat and is so wound about the head that the roll displays first the dull then the brilliant side of the fabric. The shoes, from Enzel, are brown patent leather and white kid, combined with brown lizard.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

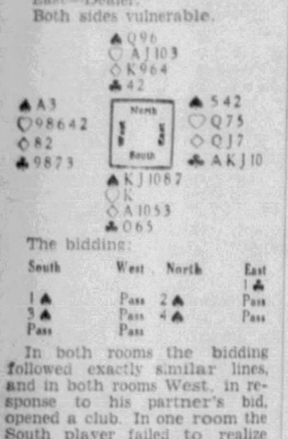
Team-of-Four Play

When team meets team in a game of duplicate contract bridge, and one of the contending sides feels that it is essention to victory that they make a very effective use of the cards they hold, accurate play may be required to redeem the optimistic forecast made by the bidding.

Recently two strong teams, ancient rivals, met at the University Club in the city of Madison, Wis., to determine the championship of the capital of that great state. They had met many times before, and victory had sometimes favored one team and sometimes the other. One of the final hands in their most recent match—in fact, as it afterwards developed, the decisive hand—was the following:

East—Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

In both rooms the bidding followed exactly similar lines, and in both rooms West, in response to his partner's bid, opened a club. In one room the South player failed to realize the full possibility of his hand, and, as a result, was defeated one trick.

Mr. Theodore Bennett was South in the other room, and he formed, early in the play, a correct conception of its possibilities. East, after winning the first round of clubs with the King, led a trump, desiring to stop, if possible, a third round ruff in clubs. West won with the Ace, and returned the trump suit, the 9 in Dummy holding the trick. South saw that in order to make his contract he must establish an extra trick in hearts. It appeared improbable that the Queen would drop from the third round, so a finesse must be taken against East or the squeeze attempted. The finesse actually would prove equally effective. Weighing the relative chances, South decided that the squeeze offered the better possibilities, so, to the fourth round, he led a club from the Dummy. East won with the Ace, and returned his last trump, thereby removing the last trump from Dummy also. South won this lead with the King, and followed with his two last trumps, upon which East discarded his remaining clubs. The King of hearts was then led, followed by the Queen of clubs.

East was squeezed. He could not part with the single guard to the heart Queen, and so was forced to discard a diamond, hoping against hope that his partner held three to the Ten. South then led a small diamond, to the Dummy, cashed the Ace of hearts, returned to his own hand with a diamond, and thus fulfilled his contract, and won the match.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

My partner bid one spade; opponent bid two diamonds. I held six diamonds—King, Knave and four small—and the other suits were useless. I doubled, and all passed. The contract was set 4 tricks, and I scored 400 points. Opponents said that I was unethical in doubling—in other words, I should have bid two notrump. I believe your ruling is: Go for a penalty when you are almost certain it will pay.

Answer: There is no question of ethics involved, and a player should always bid his hand in the way that would appear to produce or save the greatest number of points for his side.

Hay Fever Victims Can Now Stay Home

Expensive Trips Unnecessary Due to Doctor's Discovery

Indianapolis—Thousands who formerly found it necessary to take expensive trips to escape from their Hay Fever will spend this summer at home in peace and comfort. This is borne out by the records of an institution which has for years been in touch with Hay Fever victims all over America.

Many who had Hay Fever twenty to thirty years, have had no touch of the disease for several seasons. Their present comfort is due to the discovery of the basic cause of Hay Fever and Asthma by the celebrated Dr. W. J. Fugate, who developed a treatment which has brought relief to thousands. There are beneficiaries of his discovery in every part of the country.

An important booklet on Dr. Fugate's discovery of the true cause of Hay Fever and Asthma will be sent free by L. P. Highley, Mgr., Dept. 8455, 126 S. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Every Hay Fever sufferer should write for this free booklet.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Don't Let a Mistake Prey on Your Mind All the Time

Are you haunted by the past?

Did you once do something which you now remember with shame and terror?

And if you did—is there any way out? Can life ever seem clean and sweet and free again?

Brenda wonders. Out of her past has come a nightmare to haunt her, and she is desperate.

"Dear Sally:

"I am writing to you not so much for advice as for some consolation, and in the hope that you will maybe be able to help me fight against myself.

"I am 25. When I was 18 I went with a boy, and we thought we were very much in love—probably because we did not see anyone but each other for at least two years. And being with each other constantly—well, I made a terrible mistake.

"I didn't realize then just what it meant, or how terrible I would feel about it, but immediately after I came to myself, and I realized it wasn't love. I then broke off with the boy, trying to tell him just how I felt. He couldn't seem to understand; but then, he had been around and was much older than I, while I was just new and green in everything.

"I haven't seen this boy for four years, and I know now that I hate him. But now I am engaged to another boy and I just can't tell him about my terrible mishap, as he is narrow-minded and wouldn't understand. Maybe you will say that 'he is human.' Yes, they are all human—but just for themselves. In other words, I know he just couldn't see how a girl could do like that. A boy can be human, but not a girl.

LIVES IN FEAR

"My big trouble now is that we will be married soon, I just can't tell him, and I live in terrible fear. I am afraid that I will lose him after we are married, if he should ever find out. I know he won't find out from this other boy, though, because he is married now and lives in another country, but I keep thinking, always, of the fear that comes into my mind, and, oh, it is terrible. I just can't get it off my mind. I am getting thin from worrying over it.

"Do you think I can live it down? Can you help me?

"BRENDA."

Do I think you can "live down" that mistake you made?

Certainly, you can. But first you'll have to realize just what this rumpus is that you're making with yourself. What ails you, sister, is just plain, ornery cowardice—and selfishness.

WRONG ATTITUDE

Yes, I mean that, seriously. You're not remorseful. You are not trying to build your life into something strong and fine, to make up for the mis-step you made. All that ails you is fear that you'll be found out. And you're so busy thinking about that, wallowing in morbid brooding, doping yourself by thinking about yourself, that you haven't had time to look ahead and think about making yourself into a fine, worthwhile woman.

Snap out of it! Stop treating the mistake you made as one of the major tragedies of the universe. It isn't. Plenty of people have committed viler, meaner crimes, and beaten their way back to decency. But they didn't do it by acting like terrified rabbits. They did it by recognizing how they'd failed, and then getting busy seeing how much good they could be to a world in need of strong, courageous people.

"You're afraid you'll 'lose this man if he finds you out.'" You'd better cut that that out, and worry about losing him because you're morbid and wallowing in self-pity!

Put your mistake behind you! Stop thinking about yourself and build yourself into a regular woman!

Girls and Men Disliked by Own Sex Are Never Real Persons, Says Fay King

I WON'T GO TO ANOTHER PARTY WHERE SHE'S INVITED!
I WISH YOU'D QUIT VAMPING MY BOY FRIEND!
GIRLS DON'T LIKE ME - THEY'RE JEALOUS OF MY GOOD LOOKS FAY KING

By FAY KING

When a beautiful girl has reason to say that other girls do not like her, it is not because other girls are envious of her good looks. It is because they resent her bad manners.

There are some beautiful girls too aware of their advantage over girls less lovely, and they delight in inflicting heartaches, by vamping boy friends away, just for the fun of it.

But if a beautiful girl is as fair as she is beautiful, she will find herself just as popular with women as with men.

I have heard beautiful girls praised to the skies by other girls to their own boy friends.

A girl, girls dislike, or a man, men dislike, is never a real person.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Impetigo Contagioso Is Contagious Skin Disease

One of the skin diseases appearing during the summer months is called "impetigo contagioso." Children are the usual victims, but it may afflict adults. In men it involves the hairy part of the face and is commonly known as "barber's itch."

Dr. Copeland

As its name implies, the ailment is a contagious inflammatory disease of the skin. It is infectious, being caused by a germ that is easily passed from one individual to another.

At first the skin contains many blisters filled with pus. These blisters burst and dry on the skin, and the dried crusts appear to be stuck on, resembling wafers. Later the edges curl up and the crust drops off, leaving a reddish spot. This fades and eventually disappears.

This skin eruption is most common on the face and hands, but it may spread rapidly to the chest, fingers or legs.

This disease may be spread by infected dogs or cats, and where many children gather together, it is quickly transmitted from one child to another. In schools or in camps the disease is spread by infected towels and clothes, or by contact with infected persons. Adults sometimes acquire it in barber shops and beauty shops that are unsanitary, but more frequently they get it from children.

Children with eczema or psoriasis are often shunned by other children, for many mothers are under the impression that they are contagious. This is not true. Every precaution, however, should be taken against healthy children playing with children who have impetigo, because this is one of the most contagious of all skin diseases. The victim of impetigo should be kept out of school and away from other children.

The affected skin should be thoroughly cleansed with soap and warm water. The crusts should be removed. An ointment prescribed by a physician should then be applied to the skin. A one to two per cent ammoniated mercury ointment is usually beneficial. Avoid using strong medicines, and do not apply patent medicines or other remedies unless prescribed by your physician. Harm may result from the use of salves and ointments containing irritating ingredients.

Please bear in mind that some medicines may be successful in the treatment of one skin disease but not in another. Many mild and unimportant skin disorders are irritated and made serious by the use of wrong medicines.

If you suspect your child has impetigo, I advise that he be examined by a physician.

Household Hints

Hair ornaments made of feathers are among the new offerings in beauty shops.

To remove paint from clothing, saturate the spots two or three times with equal parts of ammonia and turpentine; then wash out in soapsuds.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When feet get hurty after traveling over hot pavements, give them a soda bath. Bowlful of warm water, two tablespoonfuls of ordinary baking soda. Then into cold water, with plenty of friction with a coarse towel, after which a talcum rub will make the little dogs happy again. The busy housewife should change shoes three times a day. Lisle stockings may prove more comfortable to feverish skin than silk ones.

That lovely, velvety look that denotes the properly made up complexion is acquired by the help of a foundation cream. No use trying to scour powder into a dry, flaky skin, it won't stick and it won't look pretty. The epidermis should be a bit moist and oily if powder is to stay put, rouge to appear natural, and powder and rouge to be blended.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Madge Finds Ronald Hurt and Suffering

There was such decision in Ronald's voice, as well as so distinct a note of suffering, that for a few silent seconds I was at a loss how to approach him with the scheme I had evolved to cure Marion of her romantic interst in middle-aged Charles Owen. But the need of enlisting Ronald in my plan spurred me, and I put my hand appealingly upon his arm when he had finished telling me that he did not wish to speak of Marion, even to me.

"My dear boy," I said, and stopped there, uncertain as to the phrasing of my appeal. Then the remembrance of the simile Dicky had used in encouraging Lillian to reveal Marion's confidence came to me, and I promptly paraphrased it.

"If I came to you and told you that Marion had blundered into a cage containing some deadly, venomous serpent, would you not lay aside your reluctance to speak of her, and help me to get her out?"

"I see what you mean," he said, "and I agree with you on one thing. The man I've always been taught to call 'Uncle Charlie' and to love as an uncle is a pretty bad actor. I've made up my mind to that. But—there isn't any 'blundering' on—on Marion's part." The girl's name seemed to stick in his throat. "She knows what she's doing every second of the time."

NO AFFECTION FOR HER

"That's just the point on which I wish to convince you, Ronald. She doesn't know what she's doing, or why she's doing it. She's simply going through an experience—a phase—that comes to almost every girl in the world. If those of us who love her will exercise just a little watchful care, we shall be able to pull her through safely; but if we stand aside, there's no telling what may happen."

His face was attentive, but his eyes were stubborn.

"But I don't see where I come in," he said. "She—she's—in love with that old—"

"Nonsense!" I said sharply. "She's no more in love with him than I am. A year—six months—six weeks from now, and she'll run a mile if she catches sight of him; but just now, as is almost every girl at some time or another, she's being swept off her feet by the flattery which lies in the attention of a polished, attractive, older man.

"But I am afraid Mr. Owen is anything but chivalrous, and has no claim to the title of gentleman. We, all of us, do not think he has any genuine affection for Marion."

"But I can't do anything about it," he said dully. "She—she won't look at me any more, since—"

"That's just the thing about which I wish to talk to you," I told him. "You're the only one who can help us."

CONSENTS TO HELP

I never have worked harder in my life than I did in the next few minutes to put my fantastic scheme before Ronald and gain his consent to it.

"All right," he said, "I'll go through with it. I'll do anything you want me to, until you tell me the danger's over, and that she's safe from that—that scoundrel. But after that, I'm through. I don't want ever to—ever to—"

There was a tremolo in his voice and I knew that the boy was perilously near to breaking.

"We'll have to hurry," I said worriedly. "I told Katie I'd take a last look at the table before dinner, and I had no idea it was so late."

I put my hand on his arm and hurried him to the house, chattering of inconsequential things as we went. Just before we reached the house I said casually;

"Remember, tonight I only want you to lay the foundation for all this. Noel will be at the dinner, as I have told you, and I do not want him upset. But I do want you to give the impression of being interested in whatever Mary is saying—a sort of suppressed admiration—and I also want you to ignore Marion as much as you can without being discourteous."

"I can do that, all right," Ronald muttered. I drew a relieved breath as I saw that his natural, boyish resentment was conquering his grief, and that my scheme would not be thwarted by any softening on his part toward the girl who had flouted him.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wedding Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. We have received an invitation to the wedding of my husband's nephew. We do not intend to go but we have to reply and we would like to know the proper way to word the reply. H.

1. You do not say what kind of invitation you received to the wedding, but I am taking it for granted that it is the usual formal engraved one. Also I am taking it for granted that the invitation included an invitation to the reception following the ceremony. (If the invitation is to the church ceremony only, it is not necessary that we acknowledge it.)

The formal invitation to the reception is acknowledged like this, if you are to "regret" it:

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hall regret that they are unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. (bride's parents)'s kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of August

The Dinner Jacket.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a gentleman to wear a white tie and vest with a tuxedo suit? J. R.

It is never correct to wear a white tie with a dinner jacket, tuxedo suit. When we say "white tie," we mean formality and the dinner jacket is informal evening wear. Indeed, when men say, "Do we wear white ties?" when they are inquiring about the dress expected of them for a certain occasion, they mean are they expected to wear formal evening attire, "tail coats," "Black ties," on the other hand, mean dinner jackets, tuxedo.

But for the last few years it has been the fashion for men to wear white waistcoats with dinner jackets when they wish to register a bit more formality than is usually registered by a dinner jacket. And this is now accepted.

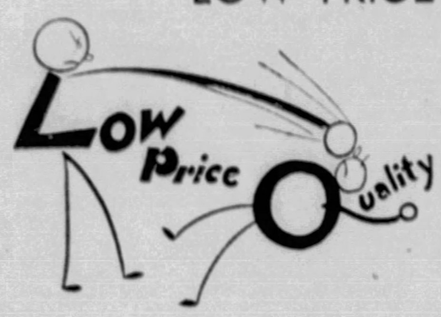
QUALITY VS. LOW PRICE



THE unceasing demand for merchandise at lower, and still lower, prices has come to the point of being a serious menace to ethical standards of practice in American storekeeping.

The fundamental "How Good Can an Article Be Made?" has changed in the past year to "How Cheap?", with the result that a knock-out blow is dealt the essential quality of merchandise.

Such a practice this store never subscribed to in the past, has not subscribed to in the present, and will not subscribe to in the future.

We have not, and will not, sell merchandise that does not offer sufficient quality and service to justify its manufacture.

This statement is made so that there need be no doubt in anyone's mind that today, as always, an honest dollar's worth is given for every dollar expended in this establishment.

WCAE on Air Until 2 A. M. With New Dance Bands In 19-Hour Schedule

Establishing a new Pittsburgh record for continuous daily broadcasting, WCAE has announced that beginning tonight the station will remain on the air an additional hour each night—until 2 a. m. The move, following a similar one less than a month ago, extends the daily broadcasting schedule of WCAE to more than 19 hours of continuous programs and permits Pittsburgh dialers to enjoy two hours of dance presentations after midnight.

Tonight, beginning at 11, three hours of rhythmic melodies by the Nite Club orchestra, directed by James G. Borrelli; Buddy Rogers and his California Cavaliers, the Bellevue Stratford Hotel orchestra, the Pacific Nomads and Anson Weeks' band are scheduled.

Buddy Rogers

The Sunday broadcasting schedule of WCAE will remain on the basis inaugurated last month—until 1 a. m.

A Pittsburgh soprano, Dorothy Jubelirer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Jubelirer, of McKeesport, makes her network debut on KDKA tonight at 12:15 a. m., when a special program marking the fifth anniversary of station WTMJ, in Milwaukee, is presented. Miss Jubelirer, who was heard over WCAE and KDKA before leaving Pittsburgh, has been featured over WTMJ for the last year and recently signed a year's contract with that station.

Tribute is paid to Frank J. Sprague, the "father of electric railways," by a former classmate at Annapolis, Rear Admiral S. S. Robison, U. S. N. retired, during a special program over an NBC network, including KDKA, tonight at 10:30, marking Sprague's seventy-fifth birthday.

Program Pointers

Grace Hayes, musical comedy star, and the Eight Sons of Eli are guest artists on a special musical Death Valley Days program over an NBC network including KDKA tonight at 8:30. Artists regularly heard on the program also participate . . . With his vacation in his home town of Richmond, Ind., a thing of the past, Singin' Sam presents his program on WJAS at 8:15 tonight from Columbia's New York studios. . . His program includes the old favorite, "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady," and the melodious ballad popular last year, "Romance."

Miss Hayes

"In My Garden," a ballad composed by Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, Sr., is a highlight of Richard Crooks' program on WCAE tonight at 8:30. Although Mrs. Firestone has written many compositions, this is her first to be presented in public.

W. C. Landis, assistant works manager of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company, is guest speaker during the American Legion program on WWSW tonight at 7 o'clock. The musical portion is presented by Nino Perinetti, piano-accordionist, and the Sharpsburg Drum and Bugle Corps of 35 pieces.

"See the Sun," a new hit composed by Edward Specter, manager of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, is featured as the finale of the Contented program, with Harry Stokes' Orchestra and a male quartet on KDKA at 8.

Those purveyors of comedy songs and patter, Les Reis and Arty Dunn, and Ben Alley, tenor, are featured in the "Surprise Package" on WJAS at 10:15.

A program honoring Wyoming, with special tribute to Yellowstone National Park, is the Parade of States presentation on WCAE tonight at 9:30.

Fan Fare

Albert Payson Terhune, noted author of dog stories, made his debut as guest speaker on the Daily Circle program on WCAE today at noon in a new series of talks on the characteristics and habits of dogs. He will be heard each Monday at the same hour. . . . Miss Edithe Stockham, of 688 Florida avenue, South Hills, is one of the five winners of $500 in Ben Bernie's recent contest. . . The contest closed July 5. Judges were Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago; Robert Isham Randolph, director of operations, Century of Progress World Fair, to be held in Chicago next year, and Al Jolson.

Mr. Terhune

Nat Shilkret tells about some of his observations of musicians . . . Flutists, he says, are very fussy and inclined to be sporty . . . Clarinetists are apt to be students . . . Oboe players are good natured with just a touch of sensitive nervousness, but not nearly so temperamental as solo violinists . . . Trumpet players are highly sensitive, horn players are exacting about their playing, but not to the extent of making them lose their humor, and pianists seem to develop the composer's feeling most readily.

Arthur Tracy, the Street Singer, is to join the artists on Nat Shilkret's WJAS program soon.

The new announcer you've heard on WCAE is Joe Porter, of Sewickley . . . Beginning Saturday, the WLW Follies on WCAE move from 9 p. m. to 11:05 p. m. . . . George Burns and Gracie Allen no longer have to work behind a screen for their radio appearances . . . Studio attaches have gotten used to Gracie's brand of humor and now brace themselves for the shock . . . Kay Donna, in addition to her Monday night programs, is now being starred on two other network broadcasts—on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 8:30 a. m. with the Flying Fingers.

Haley, Borrelli In Nite Club

Artists featured in the Sun-Telegraph Nite Club of the Air on WCAE tonight at 11 are Betty Cruikshank, contralto, and Richard Koch, baritone, with Pat Haley, master of ceremonies, and an orchestra directed by James G. Borrelli.

An interesting and educational program for the kiddies is presented during the Sun-Telegraph broadcast, under the direction of Jane White, on WCAE at 4:45.

News flashes by Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, are broadcast at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:30 p. m. and 6:30 p. m.

"Here and There," a fascinating travel talk for vacationists, is heard on WCAE tomorrow morning at 10:30.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: This gag of giving your name every time a bum is arrested in the provinces is getting funnier . . . The latest comes from New Britain. The papers there tell of a vagrant, who applied for a night's lodging at the jail-house and he insisted he was you . . . And so that makes the third police blotter around the country with your alleged autograph . . . The J. Gilbert-Virginia Bruce wedding is set for August 10 . . . The H. Bannister-Nanci Lyon affair is absolutely on —and now it is told how she will wed him on the other side as soon as she is done with the E. Cantor flicker . . . Remember Frank Hazzard, the tenor? . . . He is now at the Cocoanut Grove in L. A. . . . Well, he married Betty Junod in the hush manner before they went West . . . Beth Moreno, who is the daughter of Antonio Moreno, will middle-aisle it with Francis Tappaan on August 22. . . . Harpo Marx and Florinne McKinney are very much that way . . . Congressman Dickstein, of New York, was quietly merged to his sec'y the other day.

Gregory Ratoff's impersonation of a movie impresario in "What Price Hollywood?" was supposed to be a satire on Sam Goldwyn. But they say the producer's office in that movie is a replica of B. P. Schulberg's . . . I thought they could have made the old Mizner Ford gag funnier. I mean, the picture doesn't do it the way Mizner did it at an opening at Grauman's Chinese Theater in Hollywood . . . By the way, the French song that Connie Bennett warbles in it was to be in Swanson's next picture, but Bennett beat her to it again . . . The feud between these two is really funny, with Connie getting the edge up to now. Connie got Gloria's man, her pet story, "Rockabye," her pet song and, I imagine, her pet goat, too . . . Wallace Cox wonders if you wouldn't reprint his "Cocktail Hour" verse. I can't find it in this heat. When did you use it, do you recall? . . . You owe me money for incidentals.

If you know of any chorus girls, who really are hungry and haven't the price—give me their names . . . A restaurant owner, who warns you that he must not have any publicity of any sort, will feed half a dozen of them. He called in response to your piece in "Portrait" . . . And he isn't a Broadway man, either . . . How about those friends of yours around the Stem? . . . By the way, at the Sam H. Harris Theater they are hiring girls for a new show called "Fresh Faces," who have exactly what the title implies—fresh faces . . . If you want a thrill or two read Jack Kofoed's book, "Thrills in Sport," particularly the opening article on the Dempsey-Firpo classic and the one on p. 88, which is a touching baseball fact between two pals . . . Talk about genius going astray, the doorman at No. 110 W. 55th is a portrait painter of great skill.

The longest show in town is the one at the Paramount—and Harry Richman's vocalizing was never better. . . Bert Wheeler left tonight—they let him out of the last 3 shows so he could make Chicago in time . . . After a week there he rejoins Woolsey on the coast and what will become of Vera Marsh, poor thing? . . . Well, Vera will open in "Ballyhoo"—and Bert will get back to town as soon as possible, for he says, this time he's found the ideal pal . . . She's a cute person, at that... Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard are still in a clinch . . . Bernie Cummins was operated on successfully the other day... Jerry Wald has made a connection with a society mag!... Betty Compson says thanks, but that interviewers around the country still confuse her with Betty Compton . . . Bill Reed suggests you telescope it to read: "Times-squarea" . . . Willie Moore has broken his shaft, again . . . John Raskob will be a grandfather any day now . . . Your newest addition is a Havana paper... You might tell the desk that a colorful yarn can be had at Canarsie when Donaldo Sockloff and Mary Demitri will merge in the public manner. They are Gypsies and the public riveting will take place at Golden City Park . . . Part of the ceremony, in case you didn't know, makes the bride promise out loud that she will make plenty of money for her husband . . . By all means see "Ball" at the Vanderbilt, veddy veddy all right . . . This is the picture dealing with the belles of the Isle of Paradise you mentioned Saturdee—and they wear less than a Minsky eyeful.

Holtz phoned. Said he sees that Hoover cut his own salary $15,000 . . . "Say!" added Lou, "sixty grand isn't bad for doing nothing, either!" . . . B. S. Moss is the latest Broadway showman to give up his theater rather than pay the taxes and interest on the First Mortgage . . . Frances Williams was operated on at Medical Arts hosp the other day. Doing okay . . . The Actors' Fund is sending critics a pamphlet which includes this: "The actor's fame is temporary and fleeting. No matter how obscure the painter, the sculptor, the writer, they leave evidence of their artistic accomplishments behind them; but the actor struts and frets his brief hour upon the stage, and then is heard no more. So let us be kind and helpful to him while he lives." . . . Whitney Bolton may chuck being a critic. He has received an offer from the talkies to go West . . . In the Mayfair flicker that wedding is a satire on what really happened to Vilma Banky and Rod at their nuptials.

David Burton is now paying for Sondra Rambeau's dinners . . . Addison Mizner has done a book—christened "The Many Mizners," which will pack all the quips pulled by his brother Wilson, I presume. It's due in Sept. . . . Ben Finney, last reported at the Adlon in Berlin, is en route to the Olympics, which is where Marjorie King is waiting for him—her romance with Bertrand Taylor going bleh when Bert went boop-a-doop-Lupe . . . Nacio Herb Brown, one of the better songsmiths, has made $94,000 on one tune —his "Paradise" number, which he rents to moviemakers. He retains all rights, it appears, and keeps peddling it to various amusements . . . By the way, the current No. 1 song hit is "In a Shanty in Old Shanty Town," an Ira Schuster product—and it's about time, too. He's been waiting for such a break too long . . . I've heard of wild things, but get this: Broadway's next silly marathon will be a Sneezing Contest! . . . The town is certainly upside down!

The Y. M. C. A. advocates exercise for the unemployed. . . . Wall street now offers a man pushing a loaded baby carriage with one hand and he sells pencils with the other. . . . Mr. Hayes put up a stiff objection to a certain scene with a columnist in a forthcoming yarn about the craft. What! Have you boys a friend? . . . Incidentally "Blessed Event" is being held up until October—but I hear it's better than the stage version and that Lee Tracy is immense in it . . Who's Who" is pretty fussy this time. It omits Garbo and the Bennett girls, but not Richard Bennett . . . Dressler made it . . . Caryl Bergman isn't in "Show Boat," but was with the "Rio Rita" unit when her eye-wash was tampered with by a jealous rival . . . . The various desks tried to locate her for the story. Do you know her address? . . . Nothing else stirring, not even a breeze—Your Girl Friday.

Stars Engaged For Future Picture

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, July 25. The public wants stars and it's going to get them.

Paramount plans to add Herbert Marshall and Claudette Colbert to the cast of "Lives of a Bengal Lancer"—a picture which already calls for the presence of Richard Arlen, Gary Cooper and Clive Brook.

A best seller by Francis Yeats-Brown, this colorful story of Britain's soldiers in India will be one of the big pictures coming out of Hollywood this year. Stephen Roberts will direct it, and the film will include shots by Ernest Schoedsack during an eight months' location trip to the actual scenes of the story.

Richard Arlen

Some of this footage was obtained with great difficulty because of the natives' suspicious attitude towards the camera.

On one occasion Schoedsack wanted to photograph a caravan descending the famous Khyber Pass. He had the interpreter explain to the natives that the scene was for a motion picture.

When the caravan appeared a little later, the director was amazed to see the drivers all armed with huge clubs and darting fierce glances to the right and left. He stopped the cameras and sent the interpreter to find out what was the matter.

The man returned laughing.

Only one of the natives had ever seen a motion picture, but it happened to have shown a caravan descending a similar pass. And for the punch moment a band of outlaws had swarmed down the sides of the pass and had beaten the caravan to a pulp.

BOULEVARD TALK

Strange place, Hollywood. No sooner had Harry Bannister taken off for the East than producers began to wire him picture offers. If Harry wants to fly back here, he can go to work at two different studios. . . . Sue Carol named her baby daughter Carol Lee after herself and her best chum, Dixie Lee. . . . When Gary Cooper talks to any one at lunch, his fingers are continually molding cubes of bread . . . You can scarcely get into the dancing places here on Saturday and Sunday nights. Estelle Taylor is taking ocean dips these days with Edmund Burns . . . They'll have you believe that Ann Harding is reconciled at last to playing in "The Conqueror" for RKO . . . Robert Murnau, brother of the late F. W. Murnau, is in Hollywood planning another picture with Reri, the island girl who was featured in "Tabu" . . . Newest film recruit from the society ranks is Eleanor Post, niece of F. W. Hutton, of New York. She's 18, a blonde and has just graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary in Washington. Radio has added her to their list of starlets.

JOE E. BROWN IMPROVES

Encouraged by Joe E. Brown's recent improvement, Warners are planning two pictures for him. The first, "You Said a Mouthful," is scheduled to start August 15, but this is still doubtful because the script calls for the comedian to play a marathon swimmer.

Later on, Joe will do "Campus Hero," a story of a drum major in a college band who gets into a crucial football game on a fluke.

For the first time since his illness, the comedian is showing up at his familiar haunts. He attended a baseball game the other evening and presented the trophy in the movie championship polo game Sunday. It was won, incidentally, by Daryll Zanuck's team.

Jungles

Frank Buck and his "pets" of the jungles come to the Warner screen Friday in "Bring 'Em Back Alive."

John Barrymore to Play New Film

John Barrymore has been signed by RKO Radio Pictures to star in "Bill of Divorcement," based on the famous stage play by Clemence Dane. Barrymore is to head a cast of outstanding stage and screen players, and is to play the role of father in this screen version of Dane's play which ran for more than a year both in New York and London.

Mrs. Frank Buck Has Tip for Ladies

Women whose husbands are hard to handle can gain from Mrs. Frank Buck a sucessful formula for cantankerous men. Let him go out in the jungle and suffer a few discomforts. He'll come back a princely fellow, says the wife of the animal collector whose picture, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," is now being exhibited.

Finance, Intrigue Picture Subject

"The Billion Dollar Scandal," a story of high finance and intrigue, has been secured by Charles R. Rogers for early production as one of the most important pictures on his current Paramount schedule, it was announced today.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Lenore Ulric will begin rehearsals of her new play, "Nona," August 12. It will be the production of Peggy Fears, who has engaged Arthur Margetson, prominent actor in England, for the leading male role. He will arrive in New York early in August for his second appearance on this side, the first having been with Irene Bordoni in "Paris" in 1928.

Ada May, whose last name, Weeks, is seldom heard, has returned from a long engagement in London. Formerly prominent in musical productions here, she will be one of the stars of "Follies Bergere," a production slated for early Broadway production with James Barton as another of the big shots.

"The Face On the Barroom Floor," which, as a recitation, was as popular in the brass-rail precincts as "Sweet Adeline" 30 years ago, has been made into a photoplay which is now ready for release. Remember the famous D'army poem? "Twas a balmy summer evening and a goodly crowd was there." That was the beginning of a lyric in which a tramp described and portrayed by drawing the tragedy of his life.

WHITE SQUAWS BACK IN U. S.

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP.)—Two women of Akron, O., mother and daughter, who married San Blas Indians in the hope that they would reside in Central American palaces, returned today on the steamer Ancon, destitute, disillusioned and determined to:

"Go back—never."

The women, Mrs. Charles Williams, 65, and Mrs. Gladys White Eagle, 30, were rescued from the isolated jungle on the San Blas reservation, 300 miles from the Canal Zone, by a Red Cross plane. Their fare on the steamer was paid by public subscription in Cristobal.

The San Blas Indians, husbands of the women, appeared in a circus in Akron some months ago. They said they were nobles of a civilized tribe and they spoke of palaces. Instead, the women found a jungle that was not so kind to them.

ROW OVER LIGHT BRINGS KILLING

Peter Nezinich, 49, a boarder at 325 Fourth avenue, Rankin, was held in the county jail today to appear before a Coroner's jury in connection with the fatal stabbing of Mike Kanalis, 45, early yesterday.

According to police, Nezinich and Kanalis, owner of the boarding house, quarreled over Nezinich using too much electricity while reading in bed and Nezinich stabbed Kanalis in the abdomen with a pocket knife. Kanalis died three hours later in the Braddock General Hospital.

Mrs. Helen Kanalis, wife of the victim, was cut on the right hand when she tried to stop the fight.

11 Women and 2 Men Fined in Hotel Raid

A brother's complaint that his sister was working in a North Side disorderly house brought fines for 11 women and two men today, following a raid last night on the Rialto Hotel, 600 E. Diamond street. Nell Callahan, 40, said to be the proprietor, was fined $100 or 30 days in the workhouse; 10 women were fined $5 or 5 days; two men visitors, $5 or 5 days. Four men were discharged. The raid was made on complaint of Matthew Debs, 21, of 1633 Polk street, Aliquippa, who asserted his sister, Jessie, 20, was working in the house.

LONDON, July 25.—(INS.)—The Honorable Archibald Edward Cubitt, son of Lord and Lady Ashcombe, today was granted a divorce from Lady Irene Helen Cubitt, daughter of the Marquess and Marchioness of Camden.

Lady Cubitt was accused of misconduct with an American, James Cameron Clark. She did not defend the suit. The Cubitts were married in 1926.

Hollywood Welcomes Leroy Mason

Leroy Mason's welcome back to Hollywood after a year and a half on a Nevada ranch, recovering from a broken hip, was a genuine one. This week he was assigned the part of Buck in "The Last Frontier," being produced by the Van Beuren Corporation for RKO radio release. Mason, who broke into the movies as a dare-devil stunt man, appeared opposite Dolores Del Rio in "Revenge."

Paramount Borrows Marion Nixon

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Pity the Poor Chorine!

AMONG THE many changes that the depression has created is the one in the status of the Broadway chorine. In days gone by, it was possible for a columnist at any time to tell his readers that Susie Simple received three Rolls-Royces and a diamond necklace from her society admirer that week—but that she was going to marry her poor but proud boyhood sweetheart because love was more beautiful than riches and jooels.

In those days, a chorus girl did not have to be famous in order to have a definite news value. As long as she chewed gum and held up a back drop in a turkey musical, that was sufficient. Money was plentiful, and Broadway was crowded with Wall street millionaires who liked the idea of telling their friends that they had taken out such and such a chorine.

Accordingly, the damsels made the most of a charming situation. The cafes and the gin-mills were loaded with wealthy gentlemen—on paper—and their showgirl associates. The boys vied with one another in buying precious stones for their playmates, and the price of jewelry soared to a new high.

There was no kidding about the situation either. When "Rio Rita" was playing at the Ziegfeld, the "Vanities" at the Earl Carroll, and the "Scandals" at the Apollo, the scenes outside the stage doors were wondrous to behold. The beautiful limousines that were waiting for the girls would sometimes stretch around the block. Nervous youngsters in high hats would pinch themselves and wonder if it were really true that they were going out with a chorus girl.

The situation became worse and worse. The chorines who once had so very much now had so very little. Today, a few of the ex-millionaires still try to keep up the pretense. They still retain their duplex apartments, but they hire their butlers for special occasions and eat in the kitchen when no one is looking.

The chorine who was once given a fur coat for $50,000 is now lucky to get a $5 suit of pajamas. The only rings they get these days come via the telephone. The wine parties of the good old days have turned into whining parties today.

Meanwhile, the situation hasn't been at all helpful to a mug like myself. By that I mean, when the glory of the chorus girl began to dim, the racket stories that went with her also began to fade. It was a cinch, for example, to tell of the smart chorine who made it a point to have a different date every night. With the boy friend on her arm, she'd walk to the drug store on the corner.

Once inside, she'd point to a bottle of Christmas Night perfume and explain to the sucker how much she had always longed for just such a bottle. The boy would dig up $25 just to make the little girl happy. She'd take the bottle with her, return it to the drug store the next evening, collect $15—and then have it bought all over again by another bozo a few hours later. The game didn't bring in any terrific sums, of course, but the extra money didn't do any harm. Does it ever?

And then there was the girlie who always had to make a long distance call whenever she dined with you—and asked for $15 or $20 to use the phone. Or the coy maiden who, when you were seated in her apartment, always had her colored maid come in with a laundry bill for $20 and "she just didn't happen to have any change."

Yes, my friends, these amusing sidelines of the chorus doll have also vanished. Instead of coaxing the boy friend for a bottle of $25 perfume, she's lucky to have him give her a whirl of a Childs flapjack. If she dines with a man and asks for $15 for a phone call he'll probably hit her on the head with the telephone.

Accordingly, it was my opinion that such copy for columnists was decidedly a thing of the past. But we live and learn. Meeting Arthur Rosenfeld on Broadway yesterday, I learned of a chorus girl who is actually capitalizing the depression! And just when I thought that these pleasant little chorine rackets were buried forever. This damsel is probably doing it just to prove that I'm wrong again.

At any rate, she's a sweet-faced monkey who lives in the upper Seventies. Whenever a gentleman calls upon her—and she makes it a practice to invite as many as possible to her home—she is always sitting at a desk and just finishing a letter. She asks the caller to be seated, Mr. Bones, and turns to him a few moments later with tears in her eyes.

It is a letter to the girl's mother, in Syracuse, N. Y. And it tells a very tearful tale.

"Your letter arrived this morning, mother dear," it reads in part, "and I feel dreadfully sorry about your severe illness. I wish I could leave Broadway now to be with you and to nurse you back to health.

"But I fear the situation is impossible. Several new shows are being cast, and, if I leave now, it will mean many more weeks of this terrible idleness. I am absolutely without funds to meet my room rent and must depend on a few dear friends to help me out with meals.

"Nevertheless, dear mother, I realize that you come first. I am inclosing $20 which I borrowed from a friend this morning. It will help you pay a few of the medicine bills, and I will send more as soon as I possibly can. God bless you, my dear mother."

The gentleman who reads the letter can do but one thing—and they all do it. They give the girl back the $20 that she is about to enclose, and replace it with one of their own. Just to prove that no suspicion can ever be attached to the thing, the girl always asks the gentlemen to mail the letters themselves. Which they do.

The boys all leave with the feeling that they have been with a marvelous woman. Devotion is easy enough when a girl is in the money. But to sacrifice everything when she, herself, is hungry—why, that's beautiful. Plenty of those boy friends feel it their duty to come across with additional tens and twenties for mamma as the time rolls by.

What they don't know, of course, is that the Syracuse address on the envelope is a phony—and that the letters all come back to the girl within a few days. That's why her return address is always printed so plainly on the envelope.

Not bad, sisters and brothers. Not bad.

The new plan, nonconflicting with the "Back-to-the-Farm Movement," calls for the assistance in financing of building or buying urban homes on two to five-acre tracts.

NAME COMMITTEE

It was submitted by a committee headed by William P. Witherow and includes John C. Hill, James C. Rea and C. I. Leiper. The emergency association committee will be named by Frank R. Phillips, operating committee chairman, who approved the idea.

The plan contemplates placing families in their own homes on secondary highway routes for part-time farming. It is pointed out the owners would be independent in prosperous times and self-supporting in times of reduced earnings. A reserve of surplus labor would be retained to insure the industrial life of the city.

LONG TERM LOANS

It is suggested governmental relief funds, when available, be loaned on long term loans at a low interest rate. A survey of 47 townships will be made. The report contains a survey 11 to 22 miles from Pittsburgh, with complete details on land and facilities. Information for workers with means and desire to take advantage of the plan is being distributed by R. F. Rope, extension secretary at the Downtown Y. M. C. A.

Erie Woman Lies Before Truck to Foil Evictors

ERIE, Pa., July 25.—(INS.)—Mrs. Jean Fowler always has her own way, even if she has to lie down in front of a truck to do so.

She did that yesterday to prevent nine men from removing fixtures from an auto salesroom upon which there was due a rental of $4,000.

But today, the men got their revenge when they had her and Howard Holber, who assisted her, arrested for brandishing a gun in an effort to prevent the removal of fixtures.

The body was recovered a short time later by River Patrolman Charles Snyder and identified at the morgue by a half-brother, Edward Podgordki.

Wife 'Too Pretty,' Jealous Mate Mars Beauty

LOS ANGELES, July 25.—(AP.)—Where beauty brings happiness to most women, it brought only bitterness to Mrs. Virginia Rae, 27.

Her husband, Henry, was annoyed by admiring glances she received from other men, and told her, "You're too beautiful."

Yesterday he smeared a strong caustic on her face. The police surgeon who attended her said the disfigurement will be permanent.

Murren, a vice president of the association, declares in the resolution that the third degree has ruined more cases in court than it has won. He condemns the practice as a "reversion to fanaticism(barbarism and inhumanity."

2 'TAKEN FOR RIDES,' 3 SUSPECTS HELD

Labors in Slag Pile To Learn Steel Trade

JULIAN MILLER . . . STEEL SCION, STARTING AT BOTTOM

HUNT KIDNAPING BANDITS

Two men in a red automobile were being sought by police today in connection with the holdup of two gasoline stations in widely separated sections of the city.

In both robberies the attendants were "taken for a ride" and ejected unharmed a considerable distance from the scene of the robberies. The loot in both instances was identical—$12.

The first victim was Norman Mackin, 23, of 2009 Carson street, attendant at the Down Gasoline Station at 1000 Columbia avenue, Woods Run. Mackin told police the robbers drove to St. John's Lutheran Church Cemetery, in Reserve Township, where he was released.

Allen Hill, of Arnold, Pa., attendant at the Sun Oil Company station at Baum boulevard and Negley avenue, reported two men in a red automobile held him up, scooped up $12 from the cash register and, compelling him to accompany them, drove 10 blocks to Highland Park, where he was freed.

Yale Graduate, Third Of Generation to Study Business

Laboring among the slag piles of an open hearth furnace of the Wheeling (W. Va.) district is a Pittsburgh youth. Yale graduate, and a member of the third generation to learn the steel business from the bottom.

He is Julian Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Miller, leaders in civic affairs, and grandson of the late Julian Kennedy. Both his father and grandfather began their career by laboring in the steel mills.

After a seven months' tryout, young Miller says he likes his job as "slagger" and likes the men with whom he works. He said:

"Once I fell asleep on the night shift. I woke up to find my shoes painted bright yellow. I was pretty useless at first, I guess, but they never took my mistakes seriously. I couldn't ask for a better bunch to work with."

Political Olympics Sure to Break Lots of Records

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

While national politics seem to have simmered down to a slow boil it is only the lull before the calm.

The national committees are busy digging their tunnels, the candidates are agreeing with the man in the mirror and the campaign manager is putting tape on the handle of his blackjack so it won't slip.

Things are going to bust out soon like burglars in a tin jail. The boys are watching for the other side to make the first move. Then they'll jump on them like a barefoot French farmer crushing grapes.

The orators will froth at the mouth like a rainspout in a cloudburst. The candidates will denounce everything in carload lots and the public will wish it had things on its ears so it could swing 'em closed in protection.

We are right on the edge of the political Olympics. We are going to hang up new records for parade watching, arm-waving, band-listening, bad cigar-smoking and gulping the hot sandwich at barbecues.

DRAFT PARKING WHARVES PLAN

Chief City Engineer C. M. Reppert today was completing a draft of plans for concrete parking wharves and a boulevard around the Golden Triangle suggested by Congressman Harry A. Estep.

Estep hopes to finance the construction of the project by borrowing from the United States Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The cost, he estimates, will be from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Immediately upon receipt of the plans Estep will seek approval of Mayor Charles H. Kline and Council and take the necessary steps to procure the loan.

It is expected the project will pay for itself in 20 or 25 years through revenue derived from parking, markets, bus terminals and other rentals.

BOOST OF LOAN POWER UP IN SENATE

Permits Borrowing to Value of Outstanding Delinquent Taxes

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, July 25.—Pittsburgh's City Council and School Board, the Commissioners of Allegheny County, and the Poor Directors, and borough and township governments are empowered to float short term loans equal to the amount of uncollected delinquent taxes, under provisions of a bill on final passage in the Legislature tonight. It is on the Senate calendar, having passed the House.

Loans could be floated with banks for delinquent taxes of 1931 and prior years. Notes for such loans mature December 31 of this year, but in 1933 new loans could be negotiated to meet the 1932 loan, and so on through 1936.

Under the bill, Council, with a present borrowing power of approximately $1,000,000, would be able materially to increase this authority, covering the amount of delinquent taxes. Before negotiating loans, approval of Common Pleas Court must be obtained, from which there is no appeal.

"Reasonable necessity" for the loans would have to be shown the court. School boards are restricted to the use of the money for salaries of teachers and other employes, but other government bodies could use the money for relief purposes if desired.

M'GOVERN SEES COURT BATTLE ON ROAD SNAG

Scores Water Firm's Claim for River Boulevard Land

The Allegheny River boulevard controversy may land in the courts before the tax-paying public has an oportunity to use the roadway. County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, after an impromptu discussion today of the Pennsylvania Water Company's claim for $140,000 damages, declared:

"We ought to go to court and thrash this thing out."

Commissioner C. M. Barr, McGovern's associate, termed as "ridiculous" the water company's claim and the Commissioners postponed the discussion to make a personal investigation of the boulevard and the water company plant through which the roadway must pass as a result of an engineering blunder.

Accompanying the Commissioners on the inspection trip today were to be County Solicitor J. P. Fife and Special Counsel Mortimer B. Lesher. Speaking of the water company's claim, McGovern declared:

"The Pennsylvania Water Company officials should be good sports and ask only the actual physical damage costs. The public is always giving away things to the utilities and as soon as they get into a controversy, utilities want to soak the public."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 25.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Our world of "make believe" is sad. Scores of comedians are not funny. Hundreds of "America's most beautiful girls" are not gay. Our benefactor has passed away. He picked us from all walks of life. He led us into what little fame we achieved. He remained our friend regardless of our usefulness to him as entertainers.

Will Rogers

He brought beauty into the entertainment world. The profession of acting must be necessary, for it exists in every race, and every language. And to have been the master amusement provider of your generation, surely a life's work was accomplished. And he left something on earth that hundreds of us will treasure till our curtains fall and that was a "badge," a badge which we were proud, and never ashamed of, and wanted the world to read the lettering on it. "I worked for Ziegfeld."

So goodby, Flo, save a spot for me, for you will put on a show up there some day that will knock their eye out.

Yours,
WILL.

LIGHTED AIRWAYS PROVE BOON TO FLIERS

Four Lighted Routes Converge In Pittsburgh

Paved and lighted highways for motorists!

Paved and lighted skyways for aviators!

Highways paved with concrete and stone—skyways with dots and dashes of the radio. And what a treat to ride over both!

Of course, anyone can experience the thrill of the highway, but the skyway at night is still for the privileged few—the mail pilot or an occasional passenger who for some pressing reason must make the trip at night.

4 LIGHTED AIRWAYS

Pittsburgh has four lighted and radio equipped airways branching to the four points of the compass: Eastward to Philadelphia and New York; westward to Cclumbus, St. Louis and the Pacific Coast; north to Cleveland and south to Washington. Over these mysterious paths of light and ether waves flash regularly scheduled air lines carrying passengers and mail, day after day and in all sorts and conditions of weather.

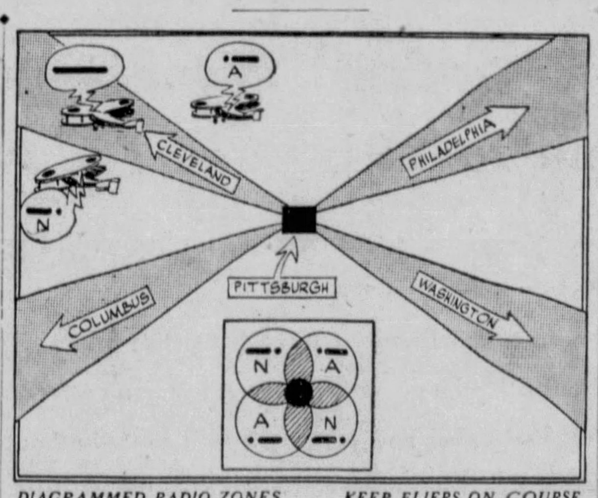
When the weather is bad paved highways and skyways are equally appreciated. Just as the motorist fears and seeks to avoid the muddy road, the aviator tries to avoid thick, muggy weather, but if he should happen to be caught in bad weather with clouds and fog blotting out the landscape below his appreciation for the skyway paved with dots and dashes is infinitely greater than the motorist who finds the smooth stretch of concrete.

RADIO AIDS FLIER

The diagram explains Pittsburgh's skyways and radio beacons. So long as his radio receiver is in working order, the aviator cannot get lost. Many a mail pilot can look back with appreciation for this latest development of science which has kept him on a true course over treacherous country through bad weather.

Where once he had to depend entirely on eyesight and his "nose for direction," he now uses his ears into which the continuous buzz buzz of the radio beacon purrs encouragement and verification.

Flying in the center of the course, he hears a continuous unbroken buzzing. To either side, he catches the code dot and dash, which tells him he is either to the right or the left of his route, and he can correct his position accordingly.



DIAGRAMMED RADIO ZONES . . . KEEP FLIERS ON COURSE

Modern Inventions Make Aviation at Night Easy

INSPECTION TRIPS

Periodically, inspectors for the United States Department of Commerce, which has charge of these lighted and paved skyways, fly over them to check on conditions. Last week, F. R. Neely, in charge of the aeronautic information division, and L. C. Elliott, airways extension superintendent, came through Pittsburgh on a tour of inspection.

They found everything in ship shape here, with planes of Pennsylvania Airlines, flying from Washington to Cleveland, and Transcontinental and Western Air, flying coast-to-coast mail and passenger service, operating busy daily schedules.

Coverdale Row Follows Talk by Mrs. Mooney

Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar and six deputies rescued Constable Ben Smith, of Library, last night, when he was menaced by a group of angry miners during a demonstration near the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation's No. 8 mine at Coverdale.

The demonstration occurred a short time after Mrs. Mary Mooney, mother of Tom Mooney, serving a life sentence in San Quentin Prison, addressed a mass meeting at Coverdale.

Smith attempted to quiet the demonstrators and was threatened, he told the sheriff. John Bosach, said to be a member of the National Miners' Union, was arrested. He will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace Charles W. Linepensil, of Library.

Unrest among the miners at Coverdale has been reported since the enforced acceptance of a 10 per cent wage cut several weeks ago. It was augmented recently by the attempt to eject Mrs. Bertha Pauletta, wife of a miner serving a life sentence in West Virginia, from a Terminal owned house.

Court Tricks Here Free 2 Olympic Hitch-Hikers

A pair of youthful magicians, whose demonstrations caused their arrest, dug deep into their bag of tricks yesterday to win a smile and freedom from Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court.

Hitch-hiking their way to the Olympic games, Israel Sarat and Francis Finneran, both of Fall River, Mass., were arrested at Washington street and Bigelow boulevard, when their tricks attracted a crowd.

Upon hearing the testimony, Magistrate Jones, curious, asked for a demonstration. He got it. After cards had been deftly handled, objects had disappeared, and the old napkin trick pulled smoothly, the magistrate had a smile and "discharge" for the prisoners.

LITTLE SISTERS OBSERVE FIRE ANNIVERSARY

In a spacious fireproof building, 250 inmates of the Little Sisters of the Poor Home for Aged, Penn and Aiken avenues, quietly observed yesterday the first anniversary of the fire which swept through the old structure the night of July 24, 1931, claiming the lives of 48 men and women.

In the place of the antiquated structure with its outside fire-escapes, which many perished trying to reach, today stands a modernly-equipped institution, with built-in stairways in the end of each hallway, permitting quick and easy exit in time of emergency.

NO TRACE OF FIRE

No trace remains of the holocaust, one of the worst in Pittsburgh's history, as a reminder of the sudden outburst of flame, which licked through the wood interior trapping aged inmates roused from sleep by the alarm, sounded at 10:30 p. m.

Heroic rescue by nuns, inmates, city and volunteer firemen and by police prevented an even more serious loss of life.

Mother Agatha, head of the home, a witness to the fatal conflagration, today voiced her gratitude to the people of Pittsburgh, for providing a remodeled home, for the aged destitute, at a cost of $378,000.

THANKFUL FOR AID

At the time of the fire there were 106 women and 129 men in the home, she said. At present there are 110 women and 140 men, with room for 80 more.

Mother Agatha said:

"We are grateful to the people of Pittsburgh for what they have done for us. Both Catholic and non-Catholic alike did their share toward making a home for these aged people and we appreciate what all, especially those other than our own church, have done."

The new institution was formally opened and dedicated by Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, last March.

TUNNEL EXPERT ARRIVES HERE

The engineer hired by the County Commissioners to help them determine whether the Wabash Tunnel would be a good investment as a traffic artery reached Pittsburgh today to go to work.

He is Ole Singstand, chief engineer of New York's Holland Tunnel. When he appeared before the Commissioners, Chairman C. C. McGovern instructed him to estimate the cost necessary to convert the tunnel, also whether such a conversion would be feasible.

Singstand was told also to study the ventilation sysem in the Liberty Tubes.

The Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad has offered the Wabash Tunnel for $4,200,000, which includes the cost of making it a traffic lane to the South Side.

Italy Denies Secret Warships Building

ROME, July 25.—(INS.)—The government today ridiculed a report that Italy was secretly building two cruisers, two destroyers and 10 smaller warships.

The report was published in the London Daily Telegraph under the signature of Hector Bywater, English naval critic.

Alleged Embezzler Due to Return Here

County Detective Michael McDermott was expected to return from New York today with Nathan Herman, representative of the Peerless Casualty Company, under arrest in connection with the alleged embezzlement of $8,000 from the corporation here.

Florida Farmers Expel Filipinos

PAHOKEE, Fla., July 25.—(AP.)—A colony of 58 Filipino sharecroppers operating leased farms in the rich bean producing section of the Everglades has been disbanded under the uncompromising edict of white neighbors.

Forty-five of the colonists, main body of the group that leased small tracts here two years ago, left Saturday for Cuba in response to the demand of approximately 150 white farmers of the district that they abandon their lands by 10 o'clock tonight.

CLEVELAND, July 25.—(AP.)—Julius Umansky, New York, was elected national chairman of the Young People's Socialist League of America here today at the final session of the league's sixth national convention. George A. Smerkin, Chicago, was named national secretary.

Ex-Pitcher Crashes To Avoid Hitting Boy

KITTANNING, Pa., July 25.—Postmaster Charles G. (Toby) Fullerton, of Freeport, former big league baseball pitcher, and his brother, Clyde, were recovering today from injuries received when their car was wrecked near Slate Lick in an accident that caused the death of Raymond Hilberry, 4. To avoid striking the boy, Fullerton swerved his car into an embankment.

WOUNDED MAN FOUND IN DITCH

McKeesport police, detectives and state police today continued to probe the mysterious injury of James Toscano, 38, of 2510 Walnut street, McKeesport, who was found in a ditch along the Long Run road near Misery Camp, last night.

Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport, who passed as the man was helped from the ditch, telephoned for a patrol wagon to take him to a hospital. Before the patrol arrived, however, Toscano had been taken to McKeesport Hospital by John Seibert, of 323 Tenth street. Police and detectives searched the spot where Toscano was lying and found a revolver covered with blood.

The hospital reported Toscano was suffering from eight wounds along the side of his head. Both Toscano and his wife, Marie V. Toscano, refuse to talk.

Slaying Suspect Undergoes Operation

Charles Peters, 37, who was taken from his county jail cell to Mercy Hospital Saturday, was recovering today from an abdominal operation. Peters is held on a charge of murdering LeRoy McCreery, 31, of River avenue.

3 Baby Ostriches Mothered By Chimpanzee

DETROIT, July 25.—(INS.)—"You could have knocked me over with a feather—particularly an ostrich feather," said John Millen, director of the Detroit Zoo, today.

He referred, of course, to the strange mother act of Susie, the chimpanzee, who is caring for three bewildered baby ostriches who thus far have survived the rigors of both northern weather and the strange maternal attitude of mother ostriches.

Abandoned by their mother soon after they were hatched, the ostrich chicks were taken over by Susie. Millen said he never saw anything like it before.

AIDES TO GREET COX IN N. Y.

Earl C. Dean, mayor of Coxtown, and four others interested in relief work and the coming political campaign, will greet the Rev. Father James R. Cox, pastor of old St. Patrick's, when he docks in New York tomorrow.

Mayor Dean, with George L. Ewing, in charge of relief work; Austin Staley, in charge of Jobless-Liberty Party campaign; George Mason and H. B. McNeal, will leave tonight to meet Father Cox when the Majestic, on which he is returning from Europe, docks at 11 a. m. The party will motor back to Pittsburgh.

FIGHT PENSION SLASH IN COURT

The battle of retired policemen to prevent a one-third pension cut was to go to court tomorrow with their attorney, Ralph H. Smith, asking a temporary injunction to prevent the slash and the reported attempt to oust pensioned men from representation on the boards of police and fire funds. It is contended the proposal violates the charter.

After a special session yesterday veteran firemen announced they would co-operate with the policemen in the court fight. The pension funds are so constructed that a cut of one would necessitate a cut in the other.

A meeting has been set for Friday at which the proposed cut in pension will be discussed. A recent change in by-laws, veteran police charge, makes it possible for a picked minority to dictate a change which will lower the income of retired men.

Shrine Delegates Given Entertainment

Entertainment included a 25-mile scenic automobile trip of the city and environs; yacht racing, an aquatic carnival and band concerts.

Special trains, arriving during the day, brought delegates from temples, including Charleston, W. Va., and Syria, Pittsburgh.

BLONDIE OF THE FOLLIES

By FRANCES MARION

Argument Over Date Ends in Rough and Tumble Fight Between Two Girls

diamond ring. Blondie noticed the men were eyeing the girls as they came out of the store, and making remarks to each other. That settled it with Blondie.

"Aw, Lottie, come on," she pleaded as she seized her friend's arm, "I'm not going to let you go."

"Don't be silly," said Lottie. "Here he comes! I've got a date, I tell you. Come on, we'll just let them drive us home!"

Prefers Not to Ride With Them

"They don't look so hot to me," Blondie replied, as she glared at the approaching man. "No, not for me. They might be a couple of kidnapers. Who are they, anyway?"

"I've told you. He's in the burlesque business—you know—a big show. We might get in."

"Us in a show? Don't be sil!"

"Hey! Come on!" the one in the flashy suit called. "What's the idea?" as he approached the arguing girls.

"Oh, Mr. Greenbaum," said Lottie, rather grandly. "This is my friend, Blondie—Blondie McClune. She's my best friend—I told you about her. We're pals!"

"Hello, baby! Come on, step on it!" Greenbaum commanded.

"Well, goodbye, Lo," as Blondie turned away. Lottie grasped her arm as Greenbaum said:

"Come and meet Sam!"

"You mean in the car? I've just been looking at it," coldly retorted Blondie, but allowing herself to be led by Lottie toward the roadster.

"This is Sam—Sam Mulk—you know Lottie, don't you?" Greenbaum introduced as they reached the car.

"Hello, kid!" said Sam.

"I forget your name, sweetheart ——," said Greenbaum.

"Blondie McClune," and Blondie emphasized the "McClune."

"Hop in!" ordered Greenbaum, opening the door.

"How shall we sit," queried Lottie. "There are four of us. Is there a seat behind?"

"Plenty of room. Hop in Blondie," invited Sam.

"No, I'll take the 'L'."

"Aw, come on—can the chatter!" Greenbaum said as he gave her a little push. "Cute chassis!" he smirked, as the push became a caress.

"Don't do that!" shouted Blondie, glaring at him. Her voice attracted the attention of passers-by, who stopped to watch.

"So long, Lottie!" Blondie started to leave.

"Oh, Blondie—come on——" Lottie pleaded.

"Come on," said Greenbaum, giving Blondie another familiar pat. "You're holding up the parade."

BLONDIE IS ANGERED

Greenbaum stopped short when Blondie, without a word of warning, slapped him across the mouth.

"I told you not to do that!" she snapped as Greenbaum stooped to recover his derby.

The spectators laughed. Blondie turned and walked quickly toward the "L," head high, eyes flashing.

"I must apologize for her," Lottie gasped hurriedly. "She's just a little hick."

"Aw, let's get outa here—the trollop!" sputtered Greenbaum, brushing his derby with his coat sleeve.

Lottie got into the roadster beside Sam. Greenbaum followed, and the car roared away.

Rage welled up in Blondie as she boarded the "L." She was so angry she didn't notice the crowded aisle as she elbowed her way toward the front of the car. A man got up, and she automatically slid into the vacant seat almost before he had left it, oblivious to the glaring looks of several slower strap-hangers.

What was the matter with Lottie lately? Making dates like that! Bums—that's all—bums! Maybe they were crooks! They looked like it. That fresh stiff! She told him to quit, didn't she? Who does he think he is? Ain't she and Lottie got good jobs? Ain't they got homes to go to? And parents? What's got into Lottie? . . . Blondie's mind raced on and on.

The swaying of the car, its stopping and starting, the terrific rumble of the elevated, finally calmed her, and as she alighted at her station and descended the steps she was almost normal again. Oh, well, she thought, Lottie was just having one of her high horse spells; she'd soon snap out of it.

IN TENEMENT DISTRICT

Blondie started on the walk home. She passed tenement after tenement, all shapes, all sizes, all drab, seeming to lean heavily on each other. No, Lottie was not the same lately, Blondie mused. She was the best-looking brunette in Lacy's wasn't she? What was she worrying about? Neatly Blondie dodged a baseball, and noticed the horde of ragged children playing in the street. The yells, catcalls and whistling created a bedlam . . . But Lottie was all right; she was straight. Blondie accepted that as gospel. A dog overturned one of the numerous garbage cans that lined the curb, and its contents blocked Blondie's path. As she backed to walk around the mess, a number of dogs came rushing up for the unexpected treat, barking, snarling, fighting . . . Lottie would no doubt settle down again when this restlessness of hers was over. Then everything would be all right.

Blondie turned the corner of her street. Like all the others, it was crowded with children, dogs, push carts, chattering street vendors, wagons, garbage cans and noise. The tenements looked like human beehives, teeming with activity that stifled its inhabitants with monotony.

Outside her house Blondie saw the flashy roadster. They had brought Lottie home safe then? Blondie noticed Lottie leaning against the door, talking to the two men who sat in the car. Yes, Lottie had changed! How earnestly she was talking now!

WALKS PAST MACHINE

Blondie decided to ignore them. As she glanced up at her windows, she saw the familiar clothes hanging on the fire escape. Greenbaum quickly slipped something to Lottie. Lottie looked at it and shoved it in her bag.

As Blondie reached the badly worn steps of the tenement she heard Lottie's voice:

"Hey! I wanna see you!"

Pretending she didn't hear, Blondie entered the building.

"She's a cute little trick," Greenbaum remarked as he watched Blondie's trim figure disappear. "Does she live here, too?"

"Yes," answered Lottie, "We've been pals since we were kids—she's kinda scared though. Down at the store she's been in the odds and ends department for over six months, and she's scared to ask to get out of there. Some people are that way."

"She may be scared, but she gave me a sock in the snoot!" recalled Greenbaum, rubbing his mouth.

"Yes, Mr. Greenbaum, 'Im going to talk to her about that—"

"See you later then. Don't you stand me up!"

"No, I won't."

The car pulled away, scattering children and dogs, and Lottie hurried into the tenement. As she reached the top of the first flight of stairs, there stood Blondie, leaning against the wall. There was a little smile on her pretty face.

DIFFERENT TYPES

"Y-o-u l-i-t-t-l-e h-i-c-k!" Lottie drawled it out she was so angry.

"I-s t-h-a-t s-o!" mimicked Blondie.

"When I introduce you to a gentleman of my acquaintance, I'll ask you to try and behave like a lady."

"Tell me more!" Blondie was her old self again.

"You're common!" Lottie was looking for trouble.

"I may be common, but I wouldn't pick up with that kind of trash—ugh!" And Blondie put on her best prop shiver.

Lottie was raging now. In her anger, she was more beautiful than ever. Her large dark eyes flashed fire. Taller than Blondie by almost a head, she towered over her. Seeing these two girls now in the dimly lighted hall, it was almost impossible to believe they had been friends since early childhood, playing with the same rag dolls, going to the same school, sharing each other's joys and sorrows. Even as children Lottie had always been the most venturesome, always taking chances without thinking, always a little dissatisfied without knowing why. Blondie was more conservative, always planning things before she attempted them. As they grew older, Blondie had become more submerged. She was just a hard working, sensible little shop girl. She had and freely admitted to Lottie all the fears, all the prejudices, all the inhibitions of a good girl.

As Lottie grew older she studied advertisements, looked into shop windows, dreaming of expensive things, and imitated her customers. She strove constantly to be superior, to get away from all this—the store, the tenement, the family restrictions.

"Those two gentlemen," Lottie continued, more furious than ever, "happen to be in a position to open the way for a career—something I've had in mind for a long time."

Blondie roared with laughter at that.

"Gee, Lottie, you're funny when you put on the Ritz. You mean you're going on the stage?"

"I suppose that's funny, isn't it?"

"It's funny to me—what can you do—sing?"

"That shows what you know—you don't have to sing in burlesque. Mr. Greenbaum said you've just gotta be a looker—and you can't say I'm not that!"

"I'll come and take a front row seat—I'd love to see you walking around without any clothes on. You're screwie and you don't know it . . ."

ROUGH AND TUMBLE

Without warning Lottie slapped Blondie in the face—and the fight was on!

When Blondie McClune and Lottie Callahan met in a fight . . . it was nothing to laugh at! No sooner had Lottie struck the first blow across Blondie's cheek, than she received Blondie's clenched fist on the side of her neck—a blow that was deliberately aimed at Lottie's delicate chin. Fists flew thick and fast. Rules against clawing or scratching are not in the code book of the fighting feminine. Both hats went off, and flowing hair was fair game. It was not long before both girls were rolling on the hallway floor, in a rough and tumble scrap that only two tenement district kids could stage.

The first round was well under way, but not long enough for any referee to tell who was winning, when Gert Slatterly mounted the stairs from the street. Gert was Blondie's sister. She had been buying the family provisions, and carried a big string shopping bag filled with vegetables. Gert glanced up at the rolling girls, and a flash of recognition crossed her face, but she did not hurry her steps. She had seen fights between these two combatants many times before.

As Gert reached the top of the stairs, she quietly and with careful and deliberate aim, swung her shopping bag. It landed neatly in the small of Lottie's back, knocking the breath out of her.

"Lay off my sister!" Gert snarled.

LOTTIE RETREATS

Lottie, realizing that the odds were now against her, started to get to her feet.

"That's right—get your whole dirty family—your whole low-down dirty family!" she gasped.

Quite calmly Gert hit her again. Lottie almost keeled over.

"Gee, Gert," Blondie said as she arose and started to Lottie's assistance, "Cut that out! If you've hurt her I'll crown you!"

Lottie turned and ran rapidly up the stairs. Blondie and Gert watched the retreating Lottie and heard her slam the door of the Callahan flat at the top. As they turned to enter their own flat, Mrs. McClune suddenly flung open the door.

"What's all the row?" and Ma McClune's voice rose like a wailing siren.

"It's Lottie hittin' it off again, Ma," said Gert."

"Oh, it sounded like a fight," answered Ma wearily, losing all interest in such a common occurrence.

Ma McClune turned and led her two daughters into the flat. They passed through a small and dingy hall into the living room, which also served as the dining room for the family. The furnishings were clearly the result of years of collecting on behalf of Pa and Ma McClune, a new piece this year, another that, and all of the Grand Rapids variety. The odor of cooking permeated the flat, with the onion predominating.

"I'm gonna poke that Lottie dame a good one some day," said Gert, as she handed her mother the bag of vegetables. "Who does she think she is anyway—struttin' around with her nose in the air."

As Ma McClune retreated to the kitchen with her burden, Blondie immediately went on the defensive gainst her sister.

"She's all right," answered Blondie. "But she's full of prunes! It's the hifaluting books she reads . . . Look—she tore my dress!" and Blondie glared down at it ruefully, trying to hold together a long tear. "Where's the sewing basket?"

Blondie answered her own question by going into her room and returning with a needle and thread. As she started to mend her dress the wails of Gert's baby filled the room.

"Oh, dear, I wish that kid would sing another song," said Blondie in a weary voice. "I get tired of the same old tune all the time."

"You'd get tired of anything—you was born tired!" came back Gert, making no attempt to quiet the baby.

RELATIVE INQUISITIVE

Just then Pete entered the flat, carrying the evening paper. Pete was a big, strapping, lazy looking individual, who had married Gert three years before and had been enjoying bad health ever since.

"Talking of being tired," said Blondie with one glance at her brother-in-law, "How do you feel today, Pete?"

"Hello, Blondie," greeted Pete, ignoring the question. "Did my eyes deceive me or was that Lottie talkin' to those two guys in that swell car? That was one of them new—"

"Here—shut up will you! Take the baby!" interrupted Gert.

"Was that Lottie with them fellows?" again inquired Pete.

"I don't know. I mind my own business," snapped Blondie.

"What are you doing, mending your dress?" asked Pete, realizing that further questioning on Lottie's affairs would only invite trouble.

"Yes," rather sadly. "An' I guess it's too old to mend."

Blondie tossed the needle and thread onto the table and started for the cupboard at the side of the room.

"Hey, Ma!" she called out to the kitchen, "I gotta buy a dress."

"What for?" Ma's voice boomed from over the gas stove.

"To go to work in," answered Blondie as she reached for an old pewter cup on the top shelf of the cupboard. "What else for?"

Carefully she took down the cup . . . in it she kept her savings.

A cry that was almost a sob tore out of her . . . her money . . . money she had saved bit by bit from her meager wages . . . it was gone!

BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

BANKER FAVORS NEW CREDIT MEDIUM

A declaration in favor of the use of trade acceptances as a means of increasing outstanding bank credit was made today by James C. Chaplin, president of the Colonial Trust Company. Mr. Chaplin also announced that his bank is preparing to launch an advertising campaign in Pittsburgh newspapers to urge its customers and the business public at large to use acceptances as a means of increasing their own credit, improving employment conditions and bringing Federal Reserve money into active use in business. He said:

"Throughout the depression, our bank has endeavored to help its customers in every possible way to meet the unusual strains of these times. In line with that policy, we believe that the present movement for more general use of trade acceptances will enable us to extend more credit to our customers. It will enable them to make sales which might not otherwise be possible. It will enable them to obtain money immediately from their sales instead of carrying the invoices on open book accounts. It will enable others to purchase necessary materials and supplies without being forced to pay for them before they can make use of them.

NEED EASY CREDIT

Business today needs easier credit to speed up many of the forces necessary for recovery, in the opinion of Mr. Chaplin. Through acceptances, millions of dollars of short-term money can be quickly released into the channels of business. There is and has been a great scarcity of negotiable commercial paper which banks can rediscount at the Federal Reserve.

Collateral loans and mortgages are not eligible to discount by the reserve. When a bank lends its money on those forms of paper, the money is to some extent tied up. Acceptances, however, can be readily rediscounted with the reserve and thus a bank is able to lend money to its customers without freezing the bank's own funds.

FINANCING EASY

Many companies have needlessly tied up large parts of their working capital when they could release it through acceptances. Many companies are hesitating to buy necessary raw materials that could seasily be financed through acceptances. Many necessary sales are being postponed or abandoned entirely because of difficulty in credits when they could be almost automatically financed through acceptances, Mr. Chaplin declared.

In addition to his position as head of the Colonial, Mr. Chaplin is vice president of the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association, and is president of the Second District Realization Corporation, which is in charge of the banks in this district which were taken over by the State banking department.

F. T. Vilmar Joins L. C. Chase & Co.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Frederick T. Vilmar, formerly sales manager of the furniture division of the Collins and Aikman Corporation, has resigned to accept a similar position with L. C. Chase & Co., Inc., 295 Fifth avenue, it was announced today.

FORECASTS BUSINESS GAIN

PAUL C. BAKER MEYER MITTENTHAL

Mr. Baker, regional manager for the East for Montgomery Ward & Co., and Mr. Mittenthal, merchandise supervisor of the eastern region, here for a three-day mechandise conference. Mr. Baker is confident business is on the upward trend and asserts trade in this district is much better than in many other parts of the country. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

SCHOOL AWARDS PRIZES

Pittsburgh School of Accountancy has announced the winners of its dean's prizes for the spring semester.

These prizes, which are the equivalent of $50, are awarded every semester to the student who attains the highest average in his class' semester final examinations.

William Stewart, of Wilmerding, led the freshman class with an average of 96 1-6 per cent, closely followed by Merle R. Hilty, of Leechburg, whose 96 per cent average was the best in the sophomore class. No junior could better the 91½ per cent average of Donald May, a student from Hazelwood.

This award has become practically a tradition at the downtown institution.

MASTEN STAFF INCREASES

A. E. Masten & Co. today announced the appointment of John B. McCormick to the staff of their investment department. Mr. McCormick is thoroughly experienced in the investment and security business, having been manager of the local office of Bonbright & Co., one of the largest New York investment houses.

Prior to his association with Bonbright & Co. he served six years in the steel industry with the American Steel and Wire Company, gaining experience both in the operating and the sales divisions. His university training was taken at the University of Pittsburgh.

MAGAZINE SEES STEEL GAIN

CLEVELAND, July 25.—(AP.)—Normal per capita production of steel has sunk to the lowest mark since the turn of the century and "the pent-up, unsatisfied demand for steel in all its forms is much greater than generally appreciated," the magazine Steel says.

The estimated per capita production this year is 295 pounds and the next lowest figure is found back in 1900 when it was 300 pounds, the magazine said.

This means the country has been trying to get along with the same quantity of steel it did in the days before the automobile, the skyscraper, improved roads and countless modern usages for steel—and when population was little more than half of what it is today.

The magazine asserted "it cannot be said that in 1930, 1931 and 1932 we have paid a penalty for excessive production in prior years. Rather, the excessively low output since 1929 foreshadows substantial improvement."

Damage Slight as Ships Clash in Fog

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP.)—The Clyde-Mallory freighter Oneida, which was in collision with the Dollar Liner President Van Buren near Boston about midnight Saturday, docked today, showing only slight evidence of the accident.

The two ships sideswiped each other in a fog in a Pollock rip channel, and reports of the accident here after the Oneida docked today said neither was materially damaged.

SALES MEETING LEADER SEES TRADE GAIN

Confident that business is trending upward, Paul C. Baker, regional manager of the East for Montgomery Ward & Co., opened a three-day merchandise conference in the Keystone Club yesterday morning.

More than 200 men and women executives, including store and department managers from approximately 30 stores in the Pittsburgh district, attended the opening session.

OUTLINES CAMPAIGN

Outlining plans for the fall campaign expected to bring a business increase of 10 to 20 per cent, Baker said:

"Business is undoubtedly trending upward. Readjustment of commodity prices has reached a point where we can safely stock our stores well with quality merchandise. With this new readjustment we will have more than price alone to offer, and quality will be more accentuated than price.

"To me the outlook for the future is bright. We have reached the bottom and the next move will be upward. We face the future with courage and optimism."

Baker was particularly optimistic concerning business in Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia. He said:

"Business in this district has been holding its own. It is much better here than in many other parts of the country. I find that the district responds more quickly to concentrated effort than other regions."

GOODS TO BE CHOSEN

Following Baker's address, thousands of samples were shown to the department heads. From the samples, he said, the department heads will select merchandise and pass their recommendations on to store managers. This procedure of stocking the stores is new, and is better suited to serving the needs of patrons, Baker said.

The meeting was also addressed by Meyer Mittenthal, merchandise supervisor for this region. It was followed by a dinner in the club.

Today and tomorrow the store heads will attend the conference to make selections based on the department heads' recommendations. Specialized groups will consider the offering and place orders for the fall months.

The orders will run into millions of dollars. Most of the goods to be purchased have been manufactured in the Pittsburgh district.

COPPER MARKET UNCHANGED

NEW YORK, July 25.—Copper was quiet during the week with domestic quotations unchanged at the basis of 5¼ cents delivered in the Connecticut Valley, although some producers are nominally ⅛ cent higher. There was no pressure to sell, smelters anticipating that reports of improvement in some business lines may be reflected in copper. In the export market, offerings by Japanese interests abroad at 4.50 cents c.i.f. Europe, checked demand for American metal which was specially offered at 4.70 cents. Some small outside lots were said to be available at 4.60 cents.

Tin held steady. Slightly better consuming interest developed at prices under the market, but sellers held firmly. There were reports of the formation of a second tin pool abroad, but these were without apparent market effect.

An early decline in lead reflected disappointment over the June statistics which failed to show decreased stocks despite reports of curtailed production. Demand was restricted to small lots for nearby requirements.

Zinc was dull but steady. Consuming interest was checked by reports of small quantities of ore selling at concessions, but this was not reflected in the price of metal.

Antimony remained dull, and in absence of business prices still were nominal.

EQUITABLE LIFE PAYS LARGE CLAIMS

Eighteen families in the Pittsburgh district received more than $91,000 during the past week from matured death claims paid by the Equitable Life Assurance Society, according to William M. Duff, president of the Edward A. Woods Company, local representative in the Frick Building. He said:

"Ninety-eight per cent of these and all claims are settled by return mail. We believe that money paid promptly is money twice paid. Especially today when emergency dollars, placed quickly into circulation, act as stabilizing factors in maintaining current standards of living."

Eight million dollars a day is disbursed by life insurance companies in the United States, according to statistics compiled by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, Mr. Duff said. Seventy per cent goes to living policy holders. This amounts to approximately $2,785,000,000 a year. He continued:

"The Equitable Society alone disbursed $196,000,000 to policy holders last year. More than $125,000,000 went to living claimants. Death claims are no longer in the majority. Life insurance is more and more an institution for the living."

Owens-Illinois Glass Awaits Legal Beer

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

INCREASING POSSIBILITIES that modification of the Volstead act may take place in the near future have stimulated speculative interest in the stocks and bonds of organizations which are in a position to benefit from changes in the status of prohibition. A major share of these companies have not shown profits for many years, but at least one corporation has been able to earn its dividend requirements and may be expected to show a substantial increase in profits when beer again becomes a legal commodity.

The Owens-Illinois Glass Company, a leading maker of glass containers, earned its regular dividend requirements for the period in the second quarter of the present year, according to an announcement made today by William E. Levis, president. The stock pays 50 cents quarterly. A dividend recently was declared payable August 15 to stock of record July 30.

Company Earned $1.46 In Past Six Months

THIS STATEMENT indicates that earnings for the quarter were greater than in preceding periods. The company has announced that net earnings after depreciation, taxes, interest and extraordinary write-offs for the 12 months ended June 30, were $1,830,228. After providing for preferred dividend requirements earnings were equivalent to $1.46 a share on the common stock. This was slightly below a year's common dividend requirements of $2 a share. During the preceding 12 months ended June 30, 1931, the company's earnings were $2,716,839 or at the annual rate of $2.43 a share on the common stock after deducting preferred dividend requirements.

The Company's cash position continues strong. Working capital has been materially increased since December 30, 1931, the date of the last published balance sheet. At that time net working capital was $14,553,569, while on June 30 of this year, including the assets recently acquired by its wholly owned subsidiary, Owens-Illinois Pacific Coast Company, it stood at $16,137,619; current assets on June 30 being $17,856,376, with current liabilities of $1,718,756.

Prohibition to Be Factor in Future

WHILE THE COMPANY is able to show a fairly satisfactory profit in spite of unfavorable business conditions, legalization of beer would materially broaden the market for its products and would permit resumption of operations at several Owens-Illinois plants. This is indicated by a statement made today which says:

"Any change in the present status of prohibition which would legalize the manufacture and sale of beer should greatly stimulate the company's business, as it will be in preferred position to supply the anticipated heavy demand. Prior to prohibition, it was the largest manufacturer of beer bottles and still produces large quantities of near beer bottles, corresponding closely to the typical beer bottle shapes.

"Officials of the company have just completed a survey of the company's plants which have been shut down during the past two years in order to determine the expenditures necessary to place them in first class condition for the manufacture of beer bottles. With substantial excess capacity in its operating plants, and a large reserve capacity in its idle plants, and with its completely automatic equipment already adapted for manufacture of bottles of this type, it is in position to start the manufacture of beer bottles in quantities almost over night."

June Coke Output Down 8 Per Cent

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP.)—Both by-product and beehive coke production dropped eight per cent in June.

By-product ovens turned out 1,536,712 tons for the month as compared with 1,742,517 tons in May. The same ovens accounted for 2,715,173 tons in June last year.

Beehive output was 41,200 tons as compared with 45,000 tons in May and 87,300 tons in June last year.

The Pennsylvania-Buffalo-Ohio district turned out 619,001 tons of the by-product coke. Pennsylvania produced 32,400 tons of the beehive total.

PIRATES GO EAST TONIGHT

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Pirates Face Hard Test.
Flag Chance at Stake.
Nine Tilts in Five Days.
Foxx Shifts to West.
Olympic Stars Recalled.
Faulty Ring Schooling.

EASTERN TRIP TO DECIDE BUCS' FATE

NOW COMES THE test that may make or break the Pirates, the longest and hardest eastern trip of the year. Success in the trying stretch of 19 games along the seaboard would establish the club as the real stuff as a pennant possibility and leave it with a fine chance to finish at the peak. Failure would mean such a heavy loss of ground, with a consequent shaking of spirit and confidence in the youthful ranks, as to make it a very difficult job for the Bucs to get back in the flag fighting later.

George Gibson

To steer the Pirate brig safely through this stormy cruise in hostile waters will be the toughest part of the managerial job on which George Gibson thus far has done so well as to make his club the surprise of the major league season. There are seven games to be played in New York, four in Philadelphia, three in Brooklyn and five in Boston before the Rovers drop anchor in the home port on August 11. Not a soft spot or a breathing spell anywhere along the route. A program that would tax even a well-seasoned team of long experience to the utmost.

AND THE HARDEST part of it all comes right off the bat this week. After spending three straight nights on railroad trains, all that the Pirates have to do is to play three successive doubleheaders with the Giants tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday, and then, following a single game in New York on Friday, another bargain bill in Philadelphia on Saturday.

That means nine games in the next five days, and double duty every afternoon except one during the remainder of the week, unless a merciful weather man somewhere gives the Gibsons a break. What with the drain on the pitching staff, the extra action and the strain of trying to hold a position, the club will be under pressure as at no other time since it toed the scratch in April.

ONE CONSOLATION IS that Pittsburgh's main rivals, the Cubs, will have to make the same trip, though escaping a similar swarm of doubleheaders. And so far this season the freebooters have proved to be much the better road club. On the first Eastern trip they lost only one series, and that being the New York engagement in which only a single game was played.

They took two out of three in Boston and broke even at two and two in Philadelphia and Brooklyn. If they can play up to the same average on this jaunt, there won't be much cause for worry about their future when they hit the home lot again.

STILL RUNNING AHEAD of the schedule with which he must keep up to topple the world home-run record, Jimmy Foxx starts tomorrow on a Western trip that promises to see him drawing nearer to the lofty mark of 60 set by Babe Ruth in 1927. In Detroit, the first stop for the A's on the Western swing, Foxx has been more successful than on any other foreign field. Seven of his four-basers have been clouted in Tigertown. Elsewhere in the West, he has made three in Cleveland, all in one afternoon, two in Chicago and one in St. Louis.

Jimmy Foxx

EVEN IF FOXX falls a bit short of beating or equaling Ruth's all-time figures, one other record may be within his reach. This is the existing home-run standard for right-hand hitters, which is one of the records still held in the National League.

This mark is 56 homers in a season, set by Hack Wilson while a Cub in 1930. So it is possible for Foxx to miss Ruth's record by three and yet grab the crown for hitting more round-trippers than any other major league batsmen ever made swinging from the right side of the plate.

THE FACT THAT Foxx bats right-handed causes the feats he has placed to his credit this year to stand out all the more impressively, as most of the parks in the American League were built for left-hand pullers.

Only two of the ballyards in the Harridge loop have left fields that are shorter than the right. These are in Detroit and Boston. In Chicago the distances are equal. The five others offer an advantage to southside swingers.

THE FAILURE OF Duke Kahanamoku to make the American Olympic team is not surprising when you consider the years that have gone by since the famous Hawaiian swimmer scored his first victories in the big games at Stockholm, in 1912. Recall some of the others who stood out in that meet with the Duke. Jim Thorpe won both the decathlon and pentathlon, only to lose his medals later when declared a professional i ecause he had played a couple of baseball games in a trolley league for a few dollars. Hannes Kohlemainen, first of England's great distance runners, won the 5,000 and 10,000-meter flat races and the 8,000-meter cross-country. Fred Kelly, now an air-mail pilot, took the 110-meter hurdles. Richie Craig captured both the 100 and 200-meter dashes, a feat not equaled until Percy Williams did it in 1928. Alma Richards won the high jump at 6 feet 4 inches. You never hear of any of these men now in connection with athletics.

WHEN LOS ANGELES gave $1,500,000 out of the city treasury and the state of California voted $1,000,000 additional to get the Olympic Games, which will open Saturday and continue to August 14, inclusive, it was figured that the advertising for Southern California would be worth much more.

The reasoning probably was correct, but the aftermath may be a dual one, according to the results. It has been suggested that the victorious contestants will probably not deny that the ultra violet rays of the Southern California sun played some part in their success, but the unsuccessful no doubt will blame climatic conditions and strange water for their failures.

LIKE SOME OTHER fighters of yesteryear, Willie Lewis thinks many of the modern boxers leave much to be desired. He says they are not properly schooled. He admits the game has plenty of good boys with the right physical qualities, but bemoans a scarcity of managers capable of teaching them what they ought to know.

Willie Lewis

The veteran says that sometimes when he's refereeing he can hardly restrain himself from stopping the fight, calling the principals to the center of the ring and telling them why and how they ought to do this and that. Not that they're not trying, but because they're making mistakes all the way through.

AS TO THE greatest fighter he ever saw, Lewis found it difficult to make a definite choice. "Stanley Ketchel wasn't bad," he said, "and old man Fitzsimmons was pretty good, too. Remember, those fellows didn't waltz through 10 or 15 rounds. They fought. I'd like to see Jim Corbett boxing today. Why, in 15 rounds, they wouldn't lay a glove on him. The present style of fighting is a lot different from that of some years ago. Nowadays, it's exceptional when a couple of boxers step as many as 15 rounds. Why, when I was fighting, going 15 rounds was little more than a gymnasium workout."

U. S. TO FACE TOUGH BATTLE WITH FINNS

By LAWSON ROBERTSON
Head Coach American Olympic Team

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 25.—Various experts and otherwise have expressed the opinion that the American track and field team has gone stale, statements to which I would like very much to take exception.

I will grant that some of our athletes went into the I. C. A. A. A. A. tired and drawn and that others were in little better condition for the Olympic finals at Palo Alto. This was because they had come on after hard campaigning and had little time for rest. But the boys who qualified for the squad at Palo Alto were tossed entirely out of training for almost a week thereafter. They will be sent through only a light drill the early part of this week and the tightening won't come until almost time for the big battle to start.

TO MISS STARS

Whenever my thoughts concentrate on our team, it strikes me as tragic to note that in the 800 and the 1500 meters we are without the services of perhaps the greatest men at their distance that are on the globe. Today I regard Ben Eastman as the most brilliant of 800 meter men. He would have been a certainty to win that event. Yet this youngster, holder of the world record at the distance, will not run simply because those who have piloted him decided not to enter him in a contest which he had at his mercy, and an event which he really needed to win to give us individual championship supremacy.

Based upon all that has gone before, Gene Venzke was our ace 1,500-meter man. He broke the existing marks for the 1,500 and the mile during the winter. He loomed up as the best 1,500 runner that any country had, but when he arrived at Palo Alto and merely had to finish one-two-three to be eligible for the event, he collapsed and finished fourth.

VENZKE GREAT STAR

Venzke has done no training since then. I am holding him for use when we meet the British in San Francisco after the Olympics are done. With the rest the boy has had, I would be willing to

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: THE FIRE THAT LASTED FOR 78 DAYS—During the winter of 1906, spontaneous combustion started a fire in McCarthy's Rag Shop, Troy, N. Y., and actually burned and smoldered for four days before it was noticed. The building, which was filled with cotton waste, was entirely surrounded by a huge wall of ice, preventing passers-by from looking in. Then, when the fire was discovered, the firemen were greatly handicapped by the immediate formation of ice from their water hose, which, after some days, gave the building the appearance of a huge ice block. For 78 days the fire burned, despite the ceaseless efforts of the fire fighters, and, on the last day, it took a combined force of 15 streams of water to quench the flames.

BUCCOS DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL WITH CUBS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Back from their courageous invasion of Chicago, the Pirates this morning were glad of the opportunity to rest. The date is open on their schedule, but in view of what the Buccos have gone through in the past few days and considering the gruelling schedule which faces them, the Oaklanders need some idle hours to catch up with themselves.

Bill Harris

The league leaders have spent the past two nights on sleeping cars and they must ride the Pullmans again tonight as they leave for New York, where three doubleheaders face them in as many days. Six dual bills must be disposed of on the impending tour of the Seaboard cities.

BUCS BREAK EVEN

Fans everywhere were thrilled by the admirable fight made by the Buccos yesterday as they came from behind under the handicap of 51,000 hostile fans to gain an even break for the day with the Chicago Cubs in the doubleheader at Wrigley Field. When the early returns of the nightcap showed the Bears to be leading by a big margin there was plenty of wailing among the club's followers, for their favorites had been toppled in the first game. But once more the youthful club gave a display of the fighting spirit which has made them the talk of the league and at the finish of the long grind they were just as well off so far as the pennant is concerned as they were when they smeared the Bruins at Forbes Field Saturday.

Lonnie Warneke held the Buccos to seven hits as he and his mates triumphed over the Pirates, with Hienie Meine up, in the opener. The score was 7 to 2. The Pirates jumped off to a one-run lead in the first inning, but the Bears clawed Heinie in the early rounds and he eventually made way for Ervin Brame. Lefty Grimm connected for three doubles in this game and Johnny Moore came through with a homer. Grimm also doubled in the second fight.

Rolly Hemsley's homer and double were the pivotal punches of a five-run drive launched against Glenn Spencer in the early inning of the second contest. Guy Bush held the Pirates runless through four rounds, but when he walked Suhr in the fifth, the Buccos began to tee off on him. A single by Piet, a two-sacker by Comorosky and P. Waner's one baser scored three runs.

SUHR BUC HERO

Gus Suhr was the big hero of the day for the Pirates. The San Francisco Dutchman found Traynor and Barbee on by virtue of singles when he came up in the sixth. Suhr walloped the ball into the rightfield seats to give his club three markers. The final count in this fight was 7 to 5.

Bill Harris shared the big honors of the day with Gussie. Bill took up the slab burden in the fifth and proceeded to reel off five beautiful shutout rounds in the furtherance of the Pittsburgh cause. Tommy Padden, the latest addition to the catching staff, was behind the bat in this game.

The Buccos picked up a sweet safety tally in the ninth on a

YANKEES GAIN CUP FINAL

PARIS, July 25.—(AP.)—For the fourth time in five years, the United States has qualified to challenge France for the Davis Cup, emblematic of world tennis supremacy.

Three times since 1927, Uncle Sam's forces have tried unsuccessfully to wrest the trophy from France's defenders, and they will have another opportunity Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Roland Garros Stadium.

The Americans' narrow margin of victory over Germany in the inter-zone finals concluded yesterday, the result of a complete failure by big Frank Shields in his two singles matches, left the strength of the invading squad a subject of debate.

Vines clinched the series in yesterday's opening match by defeating Baron Gottfried von Cramm, 3-6, 6-3, 9-7, 6-3, after a two-hour battle.

The closing match, with nothing at stake, saw the veteran Dr. Daniel Prenn give Shields a tennis lesson by scores of 6-1, 6-0, 6-8, 6-2.

The French squad was announced yesterday by the tennis federation after a lengthy wrangle, in which Jean Borotra put up a strong argument against his being included. But in the end the Bounding Basque was drafted, and will join Henri Cochet, Jacques Brugnon and Christian Boussus in defense of the cup.

Sutter Wins Title In N. Y. Tourney

HUNTINGTON, N. Y., July 25.—(AP.)—Clifford Sutter, a vastly improved player over last year, when he gained sixth place in the national ranking, is waging a victorious campaign over the tennis circuit that has caused the experts to sit up and take notice.

Winner of five tournaments in as many weeks, the New Orleans youth is setting by far the fastest pace of any player on this side of the water.

Sutter's latest triumph, scored over Keith Gledhill, of California, in yesterday's finals of the Crescent-Hamilton Club invitation tournament here, was one of the most impressive in his long list. Gledhill, ranked No. 8 nationally, went down by scores of 6-2, 6-1, 6-1.

Tilden Advances In Pro Tourney

CHICAGO, July 25.—(AP.)—Bill Tilden took a day off today, while waiting for the rest of the field in the professional tennis championship tournament at the South Shore Country Club to catch up with him.

Tilden yesterday advanced to the third round by defeating Phil Bagby, of Kansas City, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2. Other seeded players won their first round tests without much trouble.

DEATH TAKES TOM QUINN

Thomas G. (Tommy) Quinn, aged 69, one of the best known of the famous baseball stars of the Pittsburgh district, died suddenly at his home, 2690 Woodstock avenue, Hawkins Station, near Braddock late yesterday afternoon. Death was due to septic poisoning, although he was thought to be improving yesterday when he suffered the fatal relapse. He had been ill with the malady since Memorial Day.

Quinn, a brilliant catcher in the early days of the national game, caught Pitcher John K. Tener when the man who was to become the Governor of Pennsylvania and president of the National League, was rising to diamond brilliance. Quinn and Tener formed a great battery for the Pittsburgh club, of the American Association, in the days just previous to the city's advent into the National League. The National League franchise came here in 1887.

Quinn also caught Ed Morris, longtime resident of Pittsburgh, and Jimmy Galvin. Tener, Morris and Galvin were three of the outstanding hurlers of that day. Later Tommy moved to the Baltimore club, of the American Association.

When Tener was elected Governor of Pennsylvania he placed Quinn in the department of the State Factory Inspector and he held his job up to his death. He leaves his widow; three brothers, Peter J., of Braddock; William, of Wilmerding, and Nicholas, of New York City, and two sisters, Mrs. Anna May Jordan, of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Margaret McCormack, of New York City.

Funeral services will be held in St. Brendan's Church, Braddock, Wednesday at 9 a. m. Interment will be in the Braddock Catholic Cemetery.

GOLFER SCORES ACE

Sammy Fuller, local radio artist, scored a hole in one at the Rob-O-Link course in Aspinwall Saturday. He made the ace on a 160-yard hole.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

EN ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, July 25.—The boys are talking up a baseball players' union to fight off wage cuts, but the idea just won't jell in my brain. Give the players a union and they'll be demanding the five-inning game, overtime for doubleheaders and a plumber's assistant to lug up their bat to the plate.

Nick Altrock

What is more, the boys are chiseled enough in a season paying fines without coughing up more jack for union dues. And I can't imagine them calling off a world series in sympathy with the down-trodden buttonhole makers.

Nope, they can talk of a baseball union all they want to, but the only guys that will ever call strikes are the umpires, as usual.

GOMEZ BEATS GROVE FOR SIXTH WIN OVER MACKMEN

INDIANS TAKE SECOND PLACE IN AMERICAN

Associated Press.

Lefty Gomez, who in less than two seasons has risen to the status of baseball's greatest hurler, has shown his right to the throne seat by another clear-cut triumph over Robert Moses Grove, the veteran he supplanted.

The two great southpaws clashed yesterday for the second time this year and the Yankee star scored an impressive victory, 9 to 3. He defeated Grove in the first game of the year at the Yankee Stadium, April 30, when he won, 8 to 3. It marked the Castilian's sixth consecutive win over the Athletics this year and his ninth in 10 times he has faced the former champions in two years.

GOMEZ TOO TOUGH

It turned out not to be much of a battle. While Gomez did his part, shutting the A's out with four hits until the eighth inning, Grove was battered for 11 hits and gave six bases on balls. Joe Sewell led the Yankee attack with five blows, including a home run.

The defeat cost Philadelphia second place in the American League, the Cleveland Indians passing them with a pair of victories over Chicago, 9 to 7 and 9 to 6.

St. Louis and Detroit broke even, the Tigers taking the first, 6 to 2, after a first inning outburst that scored four runs, and the Browns coming back in the nightcap, 10 to 7, to give Wally Hebert his first win in nine games.

Although Dale Alexander clouted a home run with two on, the Boston Red Sox bowed to Washington, 12 to 6.

The Pittsburgh Pirates held their four and one-half game lead over the National League by dividing with Chicago. The Cubs captured the first, 7 to 2, as Lonnie Warneke registered his fifteenth victory, but the Corsairs took the second, 7 to 5, thanks to some great relief pitching by Bill Harris and a homer by Gus Suhr with two on.

CARDS COP PAIR

St. Louis built up its fences with two triumps over Cincinnati, 7 to 3 and 1 to 0. Si Johnson battled four Cardinal pitchers for 13 innings before his own error cost him defeat in the second game.

Boston and New York broke even for the day, the Braves winning, 4 to 3, and the Giants, 7 to 3.

Dazzy Vance, by striking out 10 batters, and Hack Wilson, hitting his seventeenth home run with two mates on base, enabled Brooklyn to defeat the Phillies, 5 to 4, and break a five-game losing streak.

Heinie Manush, of the Senators, was stopped after hitting safely in 21 straight games.

NEGRO PLAYER DIES HERE

Frank Warfield, manager of the Washington Pilots, of Washington, D. C., crack Negro baseball team, died suddenly last night in the Bailey Hotel, Center avenue. The Pilots completed a four-game series with the Pittsburgh Crawfords, local Negro team, at Greenlee Field yesterday afternoon.

Warfield, one of the best known Negro players in the country, was former manager of the Baltimore Black Sox. He took over the job of handling the Pilots at the start of the present season. He was 33 years of age and resided in Baltimore.

Tiger Joe Randall, Elizabeth Negro welterweight boxer, will get his first chance to bid for national recognition when he meets Tommy Freeman, former world welterweight champion, in the 10-round main bout at Greenlee Field, Wednesday night. Randall for several years has confined himself to eliminating the local talent, and now, following his recent knockout victory over Davy Grove, of the North Side, in the same arena, he will receive his first real opportunity to advance against an opponent of recognized ability around the country.

Randall's victory over Grove followed a win for the latter over Jimmy Belmont and a draw by Grove with Paulie Walker, who has boxed with success from coast to coast.

Billy Holt, Negro welterweight, of Homewood, meets a new star in the person of Jack King, of Chicago, in the main bout of the weekly show at Hickey Park, Millvale, Thursday night. King, under the management of Ray Alvis, has been stepping to the fore in recent weeks, with Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, and Tony Herrera, also managed by Alvis, remaining inactive.

Sunny Jim McVey, Braddock Negro light-heavyweight, is off the card as the opponent of Buddy McArthur, of McKeesport, in the semi-final at Hickey Park, Thursday night. Harry Williams, recently returned from Buffalo, will take his place.

FINNS TO GIVE U. S. BATTLE

wager that he could go on any track today and perhaps take the measure of the greatest 1,500-meter men in the world.

If Eastman were running for us in the 800 and Venzke in the 1,500, I quickly would predict that the U. S. A. would capture more firsts than any other nation. But faced by the likelihood that we will be defeated in both these contests, and conceding to the Finn's the decathlon, javelin, marathon, 5,000 and 10,000 meters run and giving them chances in the 1,500 meters and the discus, we will be mighty lucky to outscore them for first place.

The time was 27.8 seconds.

LOS ANGELES, July 25.—(AP.)—Masaji Kiyokawa, Japanese backstroke star, bettered the world record for 100 meters yesterday by swimming the distance in 1 minute 9.2 seconds. CROVATTO WINS TEAM BERTH

SAN FRANCISCO, July 25.—(AP.)—Dark-haired Charley Crovatto, two-fisted young salesman from Uniontown, Pa., has taken his place among the athletes upon whom the United States pins its faith in the approaching Olympic Games.

He stands beside the lad who checked his rush, Eddie Flynn, of New Orleans, National A. A. U. champion. Flynn scored a technical knockout over Crovatto in the third-round of a sizzling bout.

All other alternates were losing finalists, as follows:

112 pounds—James Perrin, New Orleans; 126 pounds, Anthony Muscarello, Chicago; 135 pounds, James McCarron, Somerville, Mass; 147 pounds, Charley Cravotta, Uniontown, Pa.; heavyweight, Doylass Hill, national intercollegiate champion, New Orleans.

walk to Padden, P. Waner's single and Vaughan's double.

The crowd was the biggest in the history of Wrigley Field. Ground rules were necessary as a result of the overflow. This fact was largely responsible for the 17 two-baggers produced in the dual contest.

Catcher Earl Grace established a new fielding mark for maskmen in the first game when he handled his two hundred and eighty-fifth chance without a slip. Johnny Bassler, formerly of the Tigers, held the mark for 284 unbroken chances.

CHILLY SAUCE

Dizzy Bill Bergwanger was among the tired but happy Pirates who were glad to get back from the Chicago warfare. Bergwanger saw his favorite club in their fine fighting exhibition.

The president of the team expects to stay with the Buccos through most of the hard eastern trip.

Gus Suhr is playing as well as any first baseman in the sport, and his batting of late has been ferocious and timely.

Strange as it may seem, P. Waner, the league's best double manufacturer, could not get one of the 17 two-suckers that popped in the overcrowded park.

The Pirates have shown they can fight under the most adverse circumstances. In view of what transpired at Forbes Field on Saturday, the Buccos were prepared for much trouble. It is a fine thing for the sport that the long program in Chicago brought no bad incidents.

Winning three out of four from the Cubs without the services of Lloyd Waner represents a big achievement.

STARS COMPETE IN IRON SHOT TOURNEY

By TOM BIRKS

A 36-hole medal play tourney over the Bob-O-Link nine-hole course at Aspinwall today finds the leading professionals and many amateurs of the district seeking to break the course record of 25 now held by Pete O'Hara, popular professional of the Westmoreland Country Club. This short iron course, where a driver passe, offers an exacting test of short iron play.

Ted Luther, professional at the Valley Heights Country Club and former Western Pennsylvania Open champion, will be one of the early starters, and he probably will pair with O'Hara. C. R. McDonald has offered $125 in cash prizes for the paid brigade, with merchandise awards to the amateurs posting the best scores.

LE BOSQUET ENTERED

Maurice Le Bosquet, former West Penn amateur champion, will head the amateurs, while Freddy Weppner, the Stanton Heights seige gun, will be among the favorites. Andy Swedko and Johnny Pasikowski, of the Pittsburgh public links team are entered. Post entries will be taken all day, and the players may start as late as 5 p. m. C. H. McDonald, professional at the course, believes the winner will have to post 100 to win.

The American Legion golf tourney will be staged at Stanton Heights this afternoon. Luncheon and dinner will be served at the club for the contestants.

In addition to the women's tourney at Culbertson Hills Thursday and Friday, and the one-day tourney at Longue Vue Thursday, the fair sex will also have a one-day tourney at the Pittsburgh Field Club Friday.

The annual Shriners golf tournament at the Alcoma Country Club Monday, August 8, is drawing a record entry. From entries already received, it appears that the field will have to start in the early morn to finish before nightfall.

Fred Loeffler, professional at Butler's Country Club course at Buena Vista announces opening Friday, Ladies Day will be held. Ladies will be permitted to play without charge each Friday for the remainder of the season.

A hole-in-one was recorded yesterday at Alcoma by Dr. U. A. Carpenter, who sank his tee shot on the 267-yard No. 4 hole. He used a brassie.

THUNHURST LEADS

At Edgewood, W. L. Thunhurst led the field in the medal play, full handicap competition with a card of 82. F. D. Keck had low net score, 83-13—70.

R. H. McKnight won the first division prize in the individual match play against par tourney at Stanton Heights, finishing 2 down.

Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Lacock carded a 91-14—77 to lead the field in the two-ball mixed foursome play at Shannopin. Mr. and Mrs. S. Carothers had a low net of 78.

W. J. Graham and E. W. Patterson tied for honors in the kickers' handicap play at South Park, each shooting an 80. P. Guylas and A. Walsh, with 72, tied for low net honors.

Punxsutawney Net Team Tops Dubois

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., July 25.—With a record of six victories and one defeat in inter-city tennis matches this summer, the Punxsutawney Tennis Club played and defeated Dubois yesterday on local courts, 8-1.

Dubois, in an early season encounter, won over the locals, thereby registering the only defeat the groundhog team has suffered this year.

Blairsville comes here next Friday for the first two inter-city matches to be played between that city and the Punxsutawney Club.

ST. CLAIR RISKS LEAGUE LEAD

The leadership of the West Penn League will be at stake this evening when the Garfield Martins clash with the St. Clair nine at Brentwood. Providing the big surprise of the second half, the St. Clair Club has taken the circuit lead, and for a time, the Homestead Aces will be watching the South Hills club battle to hold its premier position.

In the County League, the fans will travel to Wilkinsburg to watch the first half champions, the Millikins, clash with Carnegie. Carnegie led the parade in the first half only to be nosed out by Loddie Walkers' outfit.

On the North Side, the fans will have the Ferris club tangling with the North Siders, led by Art Rooney, while at Olympia Park, Dormont and Books tangle once again.

The Homestead Grays captured both ends of a doubleheader from the Columbia Cement nine at Zanesville yesterday, winning the first game, 15 to 10, and taking the second, 15 to 6.

The Pittsburgh Crawfords made it 17 in a row by downing the Washington Pilots, 15 to 4, in a benefit game at Greenlee Field.

The Homestead Aces defeated Greenfield, 11 to 1; Soho McKnights downed Canonsburg, 12 to 4; Hoopers nosed out North Versailles, 6 to 5, and Carrick Eagles upset Wheeling, 4 to 1, in independent sandlot tussles yesterday.

JUNIOR, BOYS' TENNIS PLAY DRAWS STARS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Indication that the annual Pittsburgh Center Junior and Boys' tennis championships, beginning at P. A. A. on Wednesday morning, will draw one of the largest and best balanced fields in the history of the event is clear from the fact that already Chairman H. M. Rinehart has at hand a total entry list of some 30 youthful contenders for the two crowns and trips as Pittsburgh Tennis Association delegates to the National Junior and Boys' conclave at Culver the week of August 8.

Revival of racquet interest among district youngsters has been remarkable since Jack Lauler and J. Howard Moore set the ball rolling anew a couple of years ago, with result that today a new and genuinely promising crop of lads has risen to replace the O'Loughlins, Bauer, Ramsay, Wally Arensberg, Broida and the rest of the comparatively recent old guard.

P. A. A. net performers collaborated with home talent at the Westmont Tennis Club, above Johnstown, yesterday, and the largest gallery ever assembled about the historic Hilltop courts beheld Dr. John O'Loughlin, first ranking star of the Pittsburgh area, edge out his illustrious brother, Dr. Dave, 6-4, 6-4, in a free-hitting tussle.

Meanwhile Billy, third of the O'Loughlins, fought up from the rut to outdrive Rufus Cooper, Southern Pennsylvania titleholder, 1-6, 6-0, 6-3, as Dave Devlin, former Detroit luminary, thumped Sullivan, of the Winged Headers, 6-1, 6-1.

In doubles, Dave and Billy O'Loughlin bagged from Brother John and Cooper a fracas that waxed spirited and sensational in the latter stages, 6-1, 9-7. Montgomery, Johnstown city premier in 1931, and Sullivan paired to defeat Devlin and Kunkel, of the home club, 6-0, 7-5.

EDGEWOOD VICTOR

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 25.—The Edgewood Club tennis team defeated the Washington Tennis Club in a match tournament here yesterday, 5 to 1. Edgewood took three of the four singles matches and swept the doubles contests. The summary:

Doubles—Smith and Reed, Edgewood, defeated Tyson and Boyan, 6-8, 6-2; Alcorn and Brown, Edgewood, defeated Naser and Taylor, 11-9, 6-3.

GILLETTE PATENTS HELD VALID

● In a decision just handed down by the United States District Court, District of Connecticut, Gillette patents in that suit were declared valid. The defendants were held liable for costs and damages. Thus the patented advantages exclusive with Gillette razors and blades are clearly demonstrated.

SHORTS COVER AS MARKET PUSHES UP

NEW YORK, July 25.—(AP.) — With shorts on the run, speculators for the rise were able today to push the stock market out of its narrow trading range of the past two months up to the best average level since May

The move was rather selective, but tobaccos, oils, steels, some of the utilities and rails were sent up 1 to more than 2 points with apparently little effort. Brokerage gossip had it that shorts were unnerved over the prospect that United States Steel would order the regular preferred dividend tomorrow and that its quarterly earnings may not show a severe deficit as has been predicted.

Among issues up about 2 points or more were U. S. Steel preferred, Bethlehem preferred, American Tobacco B, Liggett and Myers B, Consolidated Gas, Allied Chemical, Union Pacific, National Biscuit, Drug, Standard of California and Consolidated Oil preferred. Shares up a point or more included American Can, American Telephone, Norfolk and Western, Standard of N. J., Consolidated Oil common, Atlantic Refining, American Water Works, Sears, Roebuck and others. Santa Fe and Bethlehem Steel common rose a point, then slipped back in a temporary sag in the general list just before midday. Reading Company and Crucible preferred shot up 5 points.

Bullishly inclined traders apparently acted on the theory that the market's response to second-quarter earnings statements, some of which have been more favorable than expected, had indicated that the worst aspects of the industrial situation had been discounted, and that higher prices were in order. They also were said to be impressed with the advance in the market last week, in the face of disturbances in Germany and discussions at the Ottawa conference of plans which would further curtail our export trade. But Wall street was by no means wholly bullish. Some quarters remained skeptical, in view of the adverse indications of such barometers as electric power production.

In addition to expectations that the United States Steel directors would order the regular preferred dividend at their meeting late tomorrow, steel shares were helped by trade surveys indicating a slight, but not yet conclusive, quickening of ingot output this week, and a growing feeling in the trade that with production well below the per capita consumption as far back as 1900, before the days of automobiles and skyscrapers, some improvement must materialize before many more months. The move, however, was frankly based on hopes.

In the oils, a turn has been reflected in actual earnings. For the June quarter, Phillips reported net of 32 cents a share, against a substantial loss in the like period of last year. A few railroads are showing the results of economies. Reading Company, according to a news ticker forecast, will report net above a year ago. Southern Pacific, however, reported June net of $992,729, a drastic decline from the $3,882,453 reported a year previously.

COTTON PRICES TURN EASY

NEW YORK, July 25.—Cotton futures opened steady, 4 to 6c lower in response to lower Liverpool cables and on generally favorable weather over the week-end.

Further selling through brokers presumed to be operating for the co-operative interests was reported at the opening, but offerings were light and the market steadied after the call on trade buying and covering. October, which had sold off to 5.68c at the start, rallied to 5.74c, while December sold up to 5.89c, making the general list about net unchanged to 4 points net higher at the end of the first half hour.

The early rally which carried the market up to 5.89 for December, or back to about Saturday's close, met more offerings. Prices eased below the opening. December sold off to 5.81 and the general list showed net losses of about 7 to 8 points at midday.

LIVERPOOL, July 25.—Cotton, no receipts. Spot quiet; prices 9 points lower. Quotations in pence: American, strict good middling, 5.05; good middling, 4.80; strict middling, 4.60; middling, 4.50; strict low middling, 4.45; low middling, 4.35; strict good ordinary, 4.15; good ordinary, 3.85. Futures closed quiet and steady—July, 4.31; October, 4.32; December, 4.26; January, 4.39; March, 4.45; May, 4.51.

TRADE CHEERED BY FIRMER PRICES

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Indications from the security and commodity markets that the downward rush of prices is not a nonstop movement have heartened businessmen somewhat.

The change in sentiment is one of degree, and can easily be exaggerated. Before the lowly hog rallied in price, financial psychology was at low ebb, ad pessimism was in the saddle. The swing back toward a little cheer in Wall street was accelerated by the tentative and conditional scrapping of reparations at the Lausanne conference.

Mr. Rukeyser

Coming shortly after the cessation of gold exports on a vast scale, some financial minds began for the first time to see a little daylight, but those who are seeking through credit expansion to achieve a managed recovery are still bitterly disappointed by the continuous shrinkage of loans of even the New York district banks. The approval of the eastern rail merger on Thursday gave additional stimulus to the markets toward the close of the week.

The balance sheet of recent developments has shown a preponderance of favorable news. In reciting the favorable items, the Guaranty Survey said:

"The Lausanne conference has reached an agreement virtually bringing reparations payments to an end. Congress has adjourned without enacting any of the proposed measures that carried serious threats to business recovery; the outflow of gold has ceased, and there has been some increase in American stocks of the metal; commodity prices have displayed more firmness than has been visible in many months; the bond market has strengthened under the influence of renewed confidence; and some basic industries, notably iron and steel, have reported unexpected increases in output."

In giving the other side of the ledger, the same banking source reported:

"There have been further recessions in railway freight car loadings and other indicators of business activity, and a disappearance of banking disturbances in some areas.

"The psychological basis for economic progress in the United States seems stronger at the present moment than it has been for some time."

To me, the Guaranty Survey seems of more than routine significance because it reflects the considered views of the sagacious William C. Potter, the president of the bank, a one-time mining engineer. In the last decade, Mr. Potter has come to the very forefront as an able bank manager.

PAPERS RETAIN ADVERTISING DOMINANCE

NEW YORK, July 25.—The greater portion of the advertising appropriation of American business continues to go to newspapers. Of a total expenditure of $242,906,677 in 1931 by 435 national advertisers, 59 per cent was used for newspaper space, 32 per cent for magazine advertising and 9 per cent for radio broadcasting.

A national advertising survey conducted by the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association shows that these 435 advertisers spent $143,365,000 in newspapers last year. Of the group, 190 also used magazines to the extent of $78,317,815 and 121 used radio broadcasts costing $21,223,862.

TOBACCOS LEAD

Of the 32 industrial divisions studied in the review, newspapers were the favored advertising medium in 25.

Among the more important national advertisers, the tobacco, automotive and food industries leaned strongly toward the newspaper.

Of a total advertising expenditure last year of $37,708,876 by 14 companies in the tobacco industry, $28,730,000 was spent with the newspapers, $3,949,096 with magazines and $5,029,790 with radio.

Eighteen leading automobile manufacturers spent $36,633,860 in 1931 for advertising, apportioned as follows: $23,665,000 for newspapers, $12,399,910 for magazines and $568,950 for radio.

Expenditures by 81 food manufacturers were $20,395,000 for newspaper space, $18,292,065 for magazine space and $4,868,442 for radio broadcast, a total of $43,555,507.

GOLD RESERVE $2,782,000,000

WASHINGTON, July 25.—(AP.)—One quasi-federal agency has more than enough gold to back up the currency while an integral part of the government—the Treasury—today is borrowing $650,000,000 for relief and other financial needs.

The Federal Reserve system's monthly report for June shows participating banks held $942,000,000 over the legal requirements for reserves against deposits and currency. And the Treasury today offers for sale $60,000,000 in notes.

Of the $650,000,000 total, $227,631,000 will be used to refund indebtedness. The rest will provide relief funds and other money to run the government for the time being.

Much of the new money will go to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The Reserve Board's monthly review says that in May and June $425,000,000 of the country's huge monetary gold stock was withdrawn and that by the middle of the latter month the remaining balances held in this country by foreign central banks was comparatively small. Toward the end of June, it adds, there was an increase in gold stocks.

Consequently, on June 29, the Reserve banks had reserves of $2,782,000,000, against deposits, $738,000,000 was required and $1,102,000,000 was needed for the currency reserve, leaving the $942,000,000 excess.

All Doubts Concerning Tom Gone, Lynn Consents to Become His Wife

CHAPTER XL.

"You—and David?" asked Lynn. It was the first time she had spoken Dwight's Christian name.

"Yes; I and David."

"Twenty years ago," Dwight reminded Lynn smoothly. "Remember that."

He was instantly sorry he had said it. It dated him, somehow.

"You were going to marry him?" asked Lynn of Sarah. "I—why didn't you tell me? I didn't know, or dream."

"No, there was no question of marriage between us. Dwight couldn't afford to marry—a nobody," Sarah told her evenly. "We were—lovers."

"An elastic term," Dwight remarked.

"Not very. Not in this case. Shall I tell her about Maryland, and the place called Pleasantease? Shall I tell her about the apartment here in New York?"

"No, no!" cried Lynn. "No, don't tell me anything more!"

"But I think I must," Sarah said.

"No; it isn't necessary." Lynn found herself on her feet, facing Dwight. "Why?" she asked, and again, "Why?"

He said soothingly, as one speaks to a child, "Darling, you would never have known, from me. What Sarah's motive is——" He shrugged. But he knew her motive. He said, "Don't look at me like that. It happened so long ago; it was over so long ago. We were young and lonely and——"

"But Sarah!" Lynn couldn't understand it; couldn't reconcile it. Sarah, her mother's friend; Sarah, who had given her her chance, been kind to her. She said brokenly, "If it had been anyone but Sarah, I wouldn't have cared. Why should I? After all, I'm not a child. But to treat Sarah like that!"

TURNS AGAINST DWIGHT

She turned from him, went down on her knees beside Sarah's chair and looked up into a face that was no longer calm, into eyes no longer steady. She cried out, "It must have hurt you terribly to tell me. I—oh, Sarah, how could he?"

Her head was on Sarah's knees. The older woman touched the satin-soft hair.

She said, shaken, "Don't cry for me, Lynn. As David says, it was over long ago. If you had cared for him I would have been silent; you would never have known. But you don't care for him, Lynn; you love Tom. I had to show you how little you care for—David. If you had cared, you wouldn't have turned to me; thought first of me."

Dwight asked, after a moment, "Lynn, will you come here to me?"

She rose unsteadily and walked a few steps toward him. His hands went out to her, pleading, eager, ardent. She shrank away.

She cried out, "Don't touch me; don't dare to touch me!"

Empty, defeated, his hands dropped. He said sharply, "Lynn, you are being very foolish. Granted that I treated Sarah badly many years ago; it has been forgiven. We have been good friends, since." He appealed to the other woman. "Is that not so, Sarah?"

"I have been your friend," she answered evenly.

TOM ARRIVES

"She bears me no grudge, Lynn, you know, you must have known that there have been other women in my life. You are modern enough, woman enough to understand that. I'm not a boy, to bring you first love, first passion." He stumbled over that, loathing, fearing that verity. "But I bring you something worth so much more. Last love; love that will endure for the rest of my life." And as her eyes remained hostile, he cried out helplessly, "Oh, for the Lord's sake, Lynn, this is beyond all reason! To repudiate me for something that happened almost before you were born; for a moral scruple——"

He stopped, appalled. He had belonged so utterly to her generation a short time before. Not any longer.

She said, "It's not a moral scruple. It's Sarah! Can't you see that makes all the difference? When I try to realize—" She fled back to the other woman, eyes warm for her, arms about her. "Sarah, you've been so unhappy!"

"Not for a long time," Sarah told her. "And now you'd better go, David."

He looked at Lynn, but her eyes were averted. He put his hand on the doorknob. He said, "I'll come back."

No one spoke. The door opened under the pressure of his fingers. Tom, racing past toward the elevator, stopped, wheeled and flung himself into the room.

He said, "Oh, no, you don't! You stay here!"

IS VINDICATED

There was a moment of confusion. Sarah stiffened in her chair and sighed. Lynn cried, "Tom!" incredulously. His hair was in wild disorder; his cheek was bruised; his collar torn. He pushed Dwight back into the room ahead of him and slammed the door.

"We'll have this out!" he said.

"You'll excuse me," Dwight commented coolly, "if I say I don't care to stay any longer."

"You'll stay!" Tom contradicted. "Look here, you. Somehow you found out that there was something going on at the bank. I don't know how; it doesn't signify. You went to Rawlson and got all the dope you needed. And you've made money on his tip. That doesn't concern me. I don't care how much jack you make or how you make it. What does concern me is Lynn. Lynn thought I'd tipped someone off and was getting my whack.

"Well, I didn't. You did. I got it out of Rawlson." He looked with satisfaction at his knuckles. They, too, were bruised. "I'll say he worked for his money! He didn't tell me until I made him. But before you go, perhaps you'll be good enough to tell Lynn and Miss Dennet that I didn't have anything to do with this stock manipulation."

Dwight said clearly, "No, you didn't. You're too much of a fool. I'm not."

The door shut behind him.

"Well!" said Tom and looked from Lynn to Sarah; they were staring at him in silence. "Well, that's that!" He felt idiotic. He was let down. "I must look like the devil," he said, after a moment.

HAPPY AGAIN

The spell that had been on Lynn's limbs relaxed and released her and she flashed into life. She sprang to her feet and ran to him, putting up her arms. "Tom, are you hurt? Did he hurt you?"

"Who? Bob? Not as much as I hurt him." Tom told her, grinning. "Hey, what are you crying for? I'm all right."

"I'm not crying; I'm laughing. Yes, I am crying, but just because I'm happy." She was close in his arms now; she was saying, "Tom, please forgive me, please!"

Sarah got out of her chair and walked stiffly toward the door. She said dimly, "Everything's all right now."

But they did not hear.

Tom put Lynn in a chair and managed to occupy the same chair himself.

She said, "All these days and nights I've been waiting; hoping you'd come back, Tom. I was ready to take you back if only you'd come, even if you had done it. I'd got so I didn't care. But I would have believed you if only you'd told me again."

"I was an ass," he agreed amiably, "flinging myself out like that. Of course everything looked pretty black against me, Dwight? How he caught on—!"

LYNN EXPLAINS

She said, it hurt her terribly to say it, "It was my fault. Down there in the country, I told him. I put it to him as a case, a hypothetical case, to see what he'd think."

"Then how——?" asked Tom, bewildered.

"He asked Sarah later, casually, if you had any close friends in the bank. He knew I meant you, of course. Sarah told him you went around with Bob Rawlson. The rest was easy."

"Too darned easy. He's cleaned up, there's no doubt about that. If it gets about it won't be healthy for him around here. And Rawlson will lose his job."

"He's going abroad, Dwight, I mean."

"He'd better. And stay there, too." He shook her, a very little. "You don't care, do you, about his going? You see, I saw you at the Cherry Blossom tonight."

"Tom, you didn't! No, I don't care. I never want to see him again. Tom, were you really at the Cherry Blossom? You saw me?"

"With these old eyes. I was up there supervising the broadcast. I came back to town and went right to Sarah. I was crazy. I thought all sorts of things. Sarah headed me off. She questioned me on the bank business, sent me to find Bob and get the truth out of him; told me, that is, to find out if he'd blabbed to anyone. So I did. I came back to tell her. You could have knocked me over with a coupling pin when Bob did come across, spitting teeth and blood. Oh, sorry," he said hastily, as Lynn shivered. "I saw Dwight's car outside. Spoke to his man. Came in, and found you and Sarah. Boy, she's a corker," said Tom sincerely. "If it hadn't been for Sarah——"

"Oh, poor Sarah!" said Lynn, remembering.

"Why? Here, not going to spill over again, are you?"

She would not tell him why. She never told him.

"Tom, can you ever forgive me for getting you into this mess?" she asked. "For telling David Dwight?" She said suddenly, in honest astonishment, "And I thought I was such a good business woman, so close-mouthed, so loyal! But I was just a fool, because I thought I could trust him!"

Tom grinned. It didn't matter. Nothing mattered. Lynn was his own.

"But how can you trust me?" she wailed. "Tom, I'll go to Mr. Norton; I'll explain; I'll tell him everything."

"Lord, don't! He might offer me my job back," said Tom, "and I'm crazy about my present one."

"But do you forgive me for doubting you?"

"Sure I do," he said uncomfortably. Anyone would have doubted me. Talk about circumstantial evidence! And it was a lot my fault, not coming back and making you see reason. With a club, if necessary. Treat 'em rough, that's my motto from now on. I'm good at that—and at making people see reason," he told her gayly and gingerly caressed his bruised knuckles.

Lynn said, "Mr. Norton should know. Rawlson's there and——"

"Forget it!" ordered Tom. "How much do you love me?"

"So much that I'll marry you any time you want," she told him. She was not uncertain of retaining her position; she trusted Sarah to see her over that difficulty; and besides, the bank no longer talked of letting married women employes go since business had grown better. "There's room for us both here till the lease runs out. We'll go on working, both of us. And saving. And some day we'll get a place of our own."

"You're darned right we will. We'll get married tomorrow," he exulted, "and look here, Lynn, you needn't be worried about my job, I mean. I'm making good. They're going to let me take a crack at the research laboratories.

"I've got a keen slant on things, I think. I've been working on an idea; it has to do with sending out more than one program over the same wire. It would save 'em money. Gosh, I'll work! They've been goshdarned decent to me. The sky's the limit, if I hit on anything that will make for progress. And gosh, Lynn, how I love it!"

"I know you do. Sometimes, I think, more than you love me."

"It's different," he said absently.

Her heart contracted. She would always share him with his work; he had the creative mind, the mind that is eager and visionary. She thought proudly, I wouldn't have him any different.

"Well, that's that," said Tom.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Dorothy Anderson, "official junior reporter" of the Rowland Chapter, Wilkinsburg, of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, has lots of news about the members of her group. She tells us that Jean Johnson is visiting her uncle in Albany, N. Y., and that Jean will remain there for three weeks.

While Jean is having a good vacation at her uncle's place, Antonette Curvis is preparing to visit relatives in Cleveland for a while. Paul Gerey is also away from Wilkinsburg, having left for a visit with his grandmother. As for Dorothy herself, she's the proud possessor of seven bulldog puppies.

ENRIGHT WINNERS

Prize winners at the Enright Chapter meeting, detailed in the report of Ann Helfgott, "official junior reporter," include Bernice Chalker, for the ugliest pet; Freddie Hall, for the biggest pet; Jane Fisher, best dancing pupil, and Alvin Caplan, for a poison game.

Alan Barkley, of 328 Amber street, the club pianist, has traveled with many acts, Ann writes us. She says he was with "Cheeta and Her Pals," "The Songster," radio program, and many Warner Brothers unit shows. He also plays for the Komic Club at the Etna-Harris.

Rehearsals by Miss Miller's dancing girls, who will have quite a part in the forthcoming Junior Komic Club revue, have almost been finished, Ann writes, and from what she has observed, they will prove just the thing to add to the revue.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Why don't you become enthusiastic about something that might make you more useful to yourself and others.

Neither pleasure nor profit has made you really enthusiastic for some time back.

The years have made you prosaic and dull.

You are not particularly interested in anything except your livelihood and in this your interest is encompassed by the shell of necessity.

You display just enough spirit to carry your work on—no more.

At home you are not enthusiastic about anything that happens.

Success attained by your friends does not give you a thrill.

You lose the friendship of those with whom you come in daily contact by your lack of interest in what they do or what comes of the completed product of the place where you are employed.

But why allow life to become so drab and monotonous?

You may have to adhere to routine but there are always things for which to be thankful and over which you should be elated.

Don't be a dead one before your time.

You need enthusiasm, the kind that urges you on and gives you pleasure in any worthy accomplishment.

BEDSIDE DRAMA

According to Dr. William Harvey King, a patient can often be saved by laughter, which sometimes does more than medicine to strengthen the will to live.

Scene—Hospital.

Three physicians are in consultation.

Doctor No. 1—It's a very critical case.

Doctor No. 2—How did he react to the Pat and Mike routine?

Doctor No. 1—I didn't get a favorable reaction.

Doctor No. 3—I presume you have tried mugging?

Doctor No. 1—Yes. I mugged. I also tried wearing the ladies' hats.

Doctor No. 2—I see by the chart that he disapproved.

Doctor No. 1—Well, I don't like to go ahead without a consultation. What do you advise?

Doctor No. 2—There's only one thing I can suggest.

Doctor No. 1—What is that?

Doctor No. 2—There's no time to lose. You'll have to use emergency measures. Gentlemen, I feel that, in a case like this, we are justified in telling the patient a strong story. In fact, a smoking room story.

Doctor No. 3—That would be my advice.

Doctor No. 1—Very well, gentlemen. As soon as he wakens I will tell him about the farmer's daughter and the traveling salesman.

Thirty Minutes Later.

Doctor No. 1 emerges smiling from the patient's room. He is rubbing the palms of his hands together. The other two doctors eagerly await the report.

Doctor No. 2—How did the treatment come out?

Dr. No. 3—Successful?

Doctor No. 1—Gentlemen, I am highly pleased with the result. He reacted marvelously. Laugh! I thought he'd die!

Tax Relief Through Sales Impost Would Stimulate Business

The logic of events will induce the federal government to embrace the general manufacturers' sales tax—the PAINLESS tax.

Successfully in operation in Canada for more than a decade, this tax is revenue producing through ALL stages of the business cycle.

Even in depressed periods business transactions, on which this sales tax is based, hold up comparatively steadily.

An impost based on sales at the source of production is a certain revenue producer, whereas present taxes, computed on personal incomes and business profits, which are subject to wide fluctuations, are SPECULATIVE and insecure streams of revenue.

In its dark hour of financial need, when the existing income and general property taxes had fallen down, the commonwealth of Mississippi turned to a CONSUMERS' sales tax, and this is proving a distinct success.

The consumers' sales tax is relatively the least popular form of sales tax, and yet, despite a bitter campaign against the tax before it was adopted, the people of Mississippi have accepted it cheerfully.

The Canadian type of sales tax, which is levied only ONCE AT THE SOURCE OF PRODUCTION, is the most popular form of sales tax, the most painless, and the one best suited to the needs of the federal government.

Since the manufacturers' tax must be levied against imports as well as against home products, only the federal government has the constitutional authority to administer it.

Accordingly, this fruitful source of public revenue should be reserved for the national government. If the states also want to follow this sound principle of taxation, they might well emulate Mississippi's example, and impose a consumers' sales tax at a moderate rate.

Canada has had a fluctuating rate on the manufacturers' sales tax, which is now levied at the rate of 6 per cent.

At its next sitting in December, Congress should correct its tax blunders of the last session, and inaugurate a GENERAL MANUFACTURERS' SALES TAX OF 5 PER CENT. It should at the same time REPEAL the burdensome discriminatory "nuisance taxes," which tend to disturb the channels of distribution.

A federal manufacturers' sales tax would make budget balancing a reality, instead of a mere misleading slogan.

It would give the national government the funds needed to maintain its high credit, without bleeding taxpayers white.

It would have the magic effect of swelling governmental income, while permitting drastic reductions of existing burdensome income or profits taxes, which soak the efficient and the competent, while exempting the idle rich, who find escape in tax-exempt bonds.

The lesson of the Mississippi experience with a 2 per cent consumers' sales tax since May 1 is that there is a creative, inspiring principle in the sales tax. The sales tax, which is a Democratic tax, emphasizes the vast economic strength behind great multitudes of people of small means banded together for a common, co-operative purpose.

The success of Mississippi with the sales tax is heartening at this time. Like Mississippi, the whole country needs a scientific and productive tax system which will interfere least with economic well being.

As former President Coolidge, an advocate of the sales tax principle, has pointed out, delegation of tax-paying ultimately leads to delegation of control of our government. The sales tax is especially suitable for a self-governing people.

Work for 2,000 Men

Estep Plan for River Front Improvements Would Cost City Nothing.

Work will be provided for 2,000 men for 18 months and traffic conditions will be relieved if Congressman Harry A. Estep's plan to improve Pittsburgh's river front is carried to completion. Most important from a taxpayer's standpoint is the fact that the work can be done without cost to the city or county.

The proposal calls for the building of concrete parking wharves and a boulevard for two miles around the Golden Triangle at a cost of $4,000,000 or $5,000,000. The project would be financed by borrowing from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It would be in complete accordance with the provisions of the law, since it would be a completely self-supporting public project.

The improvement would pay for itself within 20 to 25 years through revenue to be derived from parking, markets, bus terminals and other rentals expected to yield a total of $250,000 a year. This would be more than twice the probable interest charge of the government.

In co-operation with Chief City Engineer Reppert, detailed plans are being drawn which would provide for either single or double decked wharves and a boulevard extending from the Smithfield Street Bridge around the Point to the Ninth Street Bridge.

The plan is deserving of enthusiastic support by everyone.

Senator Is Corrected

New Plans for Canal to the Ohio Do Not Propose Diversion of Water from Lake Erie.

A few days ago an editorial in the Sun-Telegraph quoted Senator Brookhart's comment on the St. Lawrence seaway treaty, in which he cited the instance of the proposed Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal as one of the future waterway projects that might be affected. He stated the treaty would prevent diversion of lake waters for such a purpose.

A member of the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania now says the Iowa Senator did not cite a happy instance, because latest plans for such a canal do not contemplate diversion of water from Lake Erie, but would supply it with water.

Under the route now proposed the canal would have a flow in two directions, from an elevation, north to Lake Erie and south to the Ohio. The principal source of water supply would be French Creek and Pymatuning reservoir, by means of a feeder line to another reservoir on the main canal. Flood water would be conserved and Lake Erie would be replenished instead of otherwise, it is pointed out.

And: "Moratorium!" they cried,
And, slightly changed, came ringing back

And back across the sea
The echo; "Cancellation!" will Come clear as clear can be.

Summer—The Acid Test

This is the season, when the most timid and susceptible bachelor can safely put away his sales-resistance, uninsulate his heart and give free reign to his lighter emotions. He is fairly safe from the madding women!

Summer is supposed to be the season of romance; but if any romance can survive the eye-shockers and sad revelations one sees on the beach, at this time of year, it is more than a mere "romance"—it is a miracle of LOVE!

Next to blackening her teeth and shaving her head, nothing can do so much to transform a woman from a thing of beauty into a cartoon of herself, as a few weeks by the wild, wild waves, caressed by the actinic rays and wooed by the ardent breezes. Pretty rough-house lovers, these two! And if there is any way of wrecking a woman's beauty, they'll find it!

If she is white-skinned and red-headed, dear old King Sol will leave a large, unsightly freckle with his every kiss on her face and arms. If her hair is her glory, he'll burn it or fade it out, and leave it to the sweet salt breezes to make it limp and sticky. If her ivory neck and curving shoulders are her chief charm, he'll promptly start peeling them—and a peeling shoulder is no more alluring than a peeled onion! But he has a way of kissing most passionately the girl whose classic nose protrudes a little beyond her sunhat.

It is safe to say that if Juliet had been lying barebacked on the beach, with dark goggles covering her eyes, scrambled hair and sunburn lotion on her nose, Romeo would never have stopped to discover whether she possessed beauties of the soul or not.

Of course, the sun finally DOES go down, even in daylight-saving time, and the moonlight softens everything, including the feminine face and the masculine heart. Which is probably why the Lord gave us bigger and brighter moons in summer when these two NEED so much more softening.

But summer is NOT the season of romance. It is the season when romances are wrecked—and only the fittest and strongest survive.

* * *

Men fall in love in spring, winter and fall, when women get into their imagination. But summer is the acid-test of love! That's why I'm a sun-hater!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 25.—Diary of a modern Pepys: In a serene morning of delicate air, to the tram to greet Carl Seitz, of Shanghai, and breakfasting at the Biltmore. Thence home and a gracious note from Helen Wills Moody, the tennis lady, to me the most personable of all athletic idols.

So boggling out my skit, and a merry chat with Baird Leonard over the telephone. With my wife to the Dave Hamptons to a tea for the novelist, Harold Bell Wright, and his lady, newly come from Arizona. And we talked of the Missouri Ozarks, the pandemonium of the world and pot likker.

Dinner on the Waldorf's Starlight Roof, talking to June and Ray Lillibridge, Fay Marble and others. Later to a play, but the evening so warm we took a horse-drawn carriage for a turn of the park. And the old jehu explained, "I allus take young folks the dark way," so flattering I bestowed an extra tuppence.

In most department stores a manicure was 75 cents. Today it is 35. Facials once $5 are now $2. But the biggest tumble is in male barbering, especially on the Bowery. One shop near Broome offers a 5-cent shave and a 10-cent hair cut. And black eyes now are "unmoused" for a dime.

Jack Osterman is out front and riding hard among the pack of Broadway's smart talkers. He comes of theatrical lineage, the son of Jake Rosenthal, long a crack company manager, and his wife, Kathryn Osterman, a superb repertoire actress whose wide and luminous beaux yeux made her a sweetheart of the sticks. Young Osterman started early in variety and was later spotted in revues. A few years ago he seemed in partial eclipse, but after a period of continence, foregoing hearty viands and living on lemon juice, he came back far thinner and much brighter. He has a puckish flair for the trigger stuff that gives the Rialto what it thinks is sophistication. Mark Hellinger, for instance asked him how business was at a flopping show. "Fine," he exclaimed, "the second row was jammed."

I confess to tingling fascination watching generously beered ladies from the side lines. But I remained too long next table to one in a cafe the other evening. Calling a captain and pointing to me, she hiccuped: "Tell that guy not to be such a hanger arounder."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Feeling that life's a wash out? Wondering what's the use of going on? I was feeling that way, too, this morning. Then I picked up this letter:

Dear Elsie Robinson:

I'm just another one of those "forgotten people" who are living in hall bedrooms these days—tramping streets endlessly, uselessly, looking for jobs, counting the dwindling dimes in my purse, wondering how long I can hold out.

All this, however, isn't new to me. I have been this way before many times, and always managed to land on my feet; so just being broke doesn't discourage me. But there's something else lately that has completely broken my morale, and that's all this depression talk.

Everyone I speak to has the same theme song, "hard times." Everyone has lost his or her grip and decided we're done for. Of course, you can't blame most of the people around here for being discouraged. Most of them haven't eaten decently for months. They look and feel like licked dogs. It's awful. And lately I've gotten as bad as the rest.

Recently I have been up against a constant temptation to kill myself. The thing's an obsession with a lot of us. Last night it became so bad that I had to leave the house. Perhaps if I wasn't sitting there staring into nothingness, that five-story drop wouldn't seem to alluring!

So I went out and climbed a hill that rises back of the town. I have always loved that hill. It is beautiful to look down from there at night, at the blueness below, with the lights twinking like fireflies. And the air is so sweet and still. In the past I have always come down from there feeling made over.

But last night I couldn't see the beauty around me. I felt as if I had really come to the end of my trail—as if I'd used up everything I had.

And then the most amazing thing happened!

Just before I left my rooming house the usual discussion was going on. Someone was saying "There's just as much gold as there ever was." They were saying it bitterly, as if it were the crowning injustice. And I suppose I felt the same way about it, for I'd been mumbling those same words to myself as I climbed that dreary hill.

And suddenly those words were wiped from my mind and, as plainly as though someone spoke, a voice seemed to say these other words, so like yet so unlike—

"THERE'S JUST AS MUCH GOD AS THERE EVER WAS!"

Such bitter words when you're poor—"there's just as much gold!" Such wonderful words when you're poor — "there's just as much God!" Yet truly I heard them!

Perhaps you'll say I imagined it, or just remembered something I heard somewhere else. Perhaps. I don't know, and it doesn't matter. I only know I felt that Voice speaking in my heart, and now everything is changed. I feel absolutely safe and sure again, ready to go on.

I haven't a job yet, and the dimes are almost gone, but I know "there's just as much God as there ever was"—and He will take care of me.

MARGARET T. YOUNG.

Just as much God as there ever was!

Just as much of His beauty as when He made this lovely world.

Just as much of His power as when He swung the stars into place.

Just as much of His vision as when He molded dust and, breathing on it, changed that dust into a man.

And just as much of His love as when, through Christ, He said: "ARE NOT TWO SPARROWS SOLD FOR A FARTHING? AND ONE OF THEM SHALL NOT FALL ON THE GROUND WITHOUT YOUR FATHER'S KNOWLEDGE .... FEAR YE NOT, THEREFORE: YE ARE OF MORE VALUE THAN MANY SPARROWS."

Just as much God as ever. Forget the gold you've lost. Reach out to the God you have!

Text For Today

The backslider in heart shall be filled with his own ways: and a good man shall be satisfied from himself.—Proverbs, xiv:14.

(Today's text is suggested by the Rev. Thomas Cook, pastor, Second Primitive Methodist Church, Arlington Heights.)

A Historian Looks at Mr. Hoover

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The Wall street journals and special pleaders are evidently much wrought up over Mr. Garner's plain speaking. This is a time for plain speaking. With 10,000,000 breadwinners jobless and children dying of slow starvation and government doing nothing about it, this is not a time for "dear-teachers-and-kind-classmates" talk.

There is one sure way to determine the effectiveness of a speech: If those whose policies it assails become a bit hysterical and abusive about it you may know that the speaker has hit center.

And when, as in the case of Garner, it becomes necessary brazenly to misrepresent what he has proposed the forces he opposes must be hard pressed.

Perhaps his none-too-complimentary comment on the character of Mr. Hoover as a leader and executive in a crisis can only be answered by calling Garner names.

Mr. Hoover's Fitness For His Job

And yet Mr. Hoover's leadership and vacillation and confusion will be frankly analyzed and discussed throughout the campaign unless the Democrats continue to suffer, as they have so long, from the inferiority complex.

Skepticism concerning his capacity to lead in such a crisis as we have been led into by him and his associates is by no means confined to Democrats and politicians.

We urge all our readers to meditate a lot on Allan Nevins' article in Current History, for July, concerning Mr. Hoover's fitness for his job. Mr. Nevins is a professor of history at Columbia University. He is one of the outstanding writers of history and biography in America today. He is not a partisan. I know him well and have never known his politics. Certainly he never has been a partisan Democrat.

He has studied Mr. Hoover with the detachment and impartiality of the historian. He sees him through the eyes of the future.

Wrecked Our Foreign Trade

Thus he finds, as every one else who thought found, that during his first year in the presidency Mr. Hoover seemed the victim of a "strange paralysis"—a paralysis "that showed most deplorably in his relations with the tariff." He had summoned Congress to make a limited revision, but under the whip and spur of Joe Grundy, a sublimated lobbyist of special interests, and it built an insurmountable tariff barrier against trade.

Mr. Hoover acquiesced—then became a militant champion of the policy he had opposed. Mr. Nevins concludes:

"In approving and defending such a piece of legislation, Mr. Hoover made himself answerable to a grave charge at the bar of history—a charge such as few Presidents would care to meet."

The result has been the wreckage of our foreign trade.

His Genius For Leadership

Mr. Hoover's constructive capacity and soundness of judgment Mr. Nevins finds reflected in his own plan for farm relief—a plan which has brought no relief to the farmers, who are sinking deeper and deeper day by day, and has resulted in the wastage of vast sums of the people's money.

Referring to the plan urged by Mr. Hoover:

"What Mr. Hoover did was to accept an improvised scheme that was obviously faulty and dangerous; to pin his reputation as a believer in scientific methods to a plan which was thoroughly unscientific. The result is that the country must accept a loss of hundreds of millions, while the farmers . . . feel that genuine relief has never been attempted."

Thus Nevins disposes of the first two "achievements" of Mr. Hoover's genius for leadership, and it is the disposition that the historian will make and the conclusion every one has reached today.

A Deliberate Distortion

Something worse than incapacity in leadership is touched upon by the historian in dealing with the doctoring of the Wickersham report on prohibition. There is something here that smacks very much of quackery or trickery. It is a serious charge, but a fair one, that Nevins makes when he says:

"On the day of its release the press was given a summary which totally distorted its contents."

It was not an accidental distortion—it was deliberate; and that means that a deliberate attempt was made to deceive the American people.

That does not make for confidence in the integrity of the nation's leadership, and lack of confidence in a crisis is tragedy.

Mr. Hoover's Mockery Of Human Misery

So, too, with Mr. Hoover's mockery of human misery in his attitude toward the depression for almost two years. Mr. Nevins merely expresses what millions have thought:

"His early statements on the depression could hardly have been worse. They showed a hollow and unworthy optimism, so patently insincere that they deceived nobody. As supplemented by the still more egregious misstatements of Dr. Julius Klein they both irritated and depressed intelligent people."

Here was a leadership that was trying to lead the people into the dark; it denoted one of several things—either an utter inability to comprehend the situation, a callous indifference to it, or consciousness of a dearth of ideas how to meet it.

'Botched the Tariff'

Prof. Nevins sums up with a portrait of Mr. Hoover that is painted with a fine fidelity to the truth:

"To say that he is a victim of the panic and the depression, that if his outlook for victory is dark it is because he has hard luck, is in large part a misstatement. Undoubtedly the view that millions will take of him will be colored by their suffering. But the great initial loss of confidence in him occurred because at the outset, when the skies were brightest, he showed inability to lead—because he botched the tariff, he botched farm relief, he botched prohibition; because he showed a Bourbon temper and an inelastic mind. If there had been no panic or depression he would have lost public support, and he deserved to lose it."

Such is the dispassionate conclusion of a distinguished and impartial historian who is not a politician or a partisan; and the vast majority of the people will find in these views a reflection of their own.

Statements Were Indefensible

To this we would add something that no historian dealing with the panic and depression can ignore in the ultimate telling of the story of the administration. There is no sophistry through which Mr. Hoover can be exonerated from a most heavy responsibility for his flagrant misrepresentation of conditions up to the very moment of the crash. The frequent statements from the highest officials of the government, assuring possible investors that the most grotesque upward flight in stocks was justified by their value and by business conditions, led thousands of men and women to their ruin.

It is incredible that the administration leaders did not positively know their statements were indefensible.

And the historian can no more exonerate Mr. Hoover on this score than the English historian can exonerate the ministry of Stanhope and Sunderland in the case of the South Sea Bubble—and no English historian attempts it.
